Of Course, Of Course
Julius Miller's House
Mr. Morrow Starts
Happy Little Octopus

—By Arthur Brisbane—

ADMIRAL HILLARY JONES, of our navy, tells the Senate foreign relations committee that in the navy pact JAPAN AND BRITAIN WON, AND THE UNITED STATES LOST.

That need not surprise anybody.

There are no Anglo-maniacs or America-maniacs among the Japanese. They know what they want, and if they don't get it, they stop.

This country, anxious to appear to have got something, takes anything offered.

Admiral Jones said England always has tried to beat down the American cruiser strength and the eight-inch cruisers, most desired by our navy, and, by the London pact England has got what she wanted.

Of course, if England had not got what she wanted there wouldn't be any pact.

The British have statesmen. You read that the naval conference in London cost Great Britain almost "$1000 a day," which is cheap considering what Britain got.

Mr. Julius Miller, borough president of Manhattan, New York City, plans to supply reasonable housing to people of moderate means and keep the population from leaving his own borough.

First he planned the new style houses, then obtained a pledge from 25 of the most important building corporations and individuals in New York, to cooperate with him in the building.

Officials in several hundred cities in which this column is published may get full information by addressing Julius Miller, Municipal Building, New York City.

Dwight W. Morrow, a national character, former partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., who has since done excellent work as ambassador to Mexico, began his campaign for the Senate in New Jersey yesterday.

Last night he told the citizens what he thinks about prohibition.

Mr. Morrow is able. If he goes to the Senate, he will get for his state anything that is to be got. He understands the art of getting. Many will vote for him because he wants to go to the Senate himself.

Men as rich as Mr. Morrow have usually sent dummies to the Senate, to do what they wanted done. To see such a man willing to go himself is a pleasant change.

Not so long ago, the government became much excited because Standard Oil was supposed to be worth "almost a billion dollars," and chopped the big octopus up into several small pieces. Each went its separate way, a little octopus on its own account.

Now Mr. Teagle, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, one of several brothers and sisters, says his company made in 1929, $120,912,794.

That amounts to 5 per cent on $2,400,000,000, and Mr. Teagle says that if the oil industry had been wiser in its methods, he would have made a great deal more.

The Rev. John B. Kelly, spiritual director of the Catholic Writers' Guild, characterizes the Anti-Saloon League's statement that it was "born of God" as "outrageous audacity."

Father Kelly says that the Anti-Saloon League, "when it attempts to flaunt prohibition before Catholics as a moral need, it is talking sheer inanities."

He adds: "If taking a drink is immoral, how about Wesley, the saint of Methodism, who, according to Lamar, George's brilliant historian, was known to swallow a 'hooker' of hot whiskey."

Prohibition and religion are closely allied, and it looks as if both were in politics to remain for some time.

The League of Nations appoints a special commission of two Swedes and one Dutchman to study the historic problem of the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem, cause of much bitterness between Jews and Arabs.

The Arabs have one of their most important places of worship immediately adjoining the Wailing Wall, where Jews from all over the world gather to lament the fall of Jerusalem.

Arabs have been in possession of Jerusalem for centuries, ever

Mother of 2 Indicted as Bank Thief

MAYOR CURLEY CALLS HALT ON CITY GRAFTING

INDICT WOMAN IN $15,000 BANK THEFT

Mrs. Marion Groves Pearl, the Mother of Two, to Face Trial in Salem

Charged with four counts of larceny in connection with a $15,700 shortage at the Salem Co-operative Bank, Mrs. Marion Groves Pearl, 31, mother of two children and recently married a second time, today was indicted by the Essex County grand jury.

The indictments were procured by Dist. Atty. William G. Clark of Salem after a two-hour session in Newburyport. Mrs. Pearl will be arraigned in Salem.

She was discharged from the bank a month ago, having held the position of assistant treasurer.

The reason for discharge was given as "irregularities in her methods," according to Wallace S. Williams, vice-president, and followed an examination of the books by the office of Roy A. Hovey, State bank commissioner.

A week before she was discharged, she had secretly married Wilbur J. Pearl, 25, clerk at a bank. She was the widow of Clayton Groves, well-known Lynn athlete of several years ago.

Following her marriage and subsequent discharge, she lived at 15 Brookline st., Salem, but denied herself to all callers. A few days ago a "For Sale" sign was placed on the home.

Today's indictments were returned on evidence gathered in a separate audit of the books conducted by District Attorney Clark's office.

CHARGE BOY GOT THIRD DEGREE

A complaint will be lodged today with Police Commissioner Hultman by Gerhardt D. Lang of Commonwealth ave., Brighton, charging that third-degree treatment of his 10-year-old son, Gerhardt W., scared him into an alleged admission that he set a recent series of fires in the Aberdeen district of Brighton.

The boy was scheduled to appear in juvenile session of Brighton court today to face delinquency charges following his arrest by Inspector Joseph J. Haggerty in the Andrew Jackson school.

Brighton police admit the boy was taken from his class in school to be questioned at the station and allege he admitted having set a fire on Sunday at 135 Colburne rd. and another fire on Tuesday at 10 Lothian rd.

The mother of the boy declares the child could not have set the fires because he was at home all day on the date on which the first one occurred and accompanied her on an automobile trip to Nashua, N. H., on the day when the second was alleged to have been set.

Little Miss Fiswick won in the final round of the British championship this afternoon by the score of four up and three to play, while Glenna, no longer the assured, confident champion who wiped out the great Enid Wilson and the greater Molly Gourlay on successive days, was giving the performance of a neophyte.

Thus, for the second year in succession, the British women's golf championship has been won by a youthful representative of the United States.

CONTRACTORS SUMMONED TO HALL FOR WARNING

Citizen Labor Employers to Get Preference; Must Pay 62½-Cent Minimum

Mincing no words, Mayor James M. Curley today informed a group of 50 contractors that grafting on city street contracts must cease.

Pounding his desk in emphasis, the mayor declared that "skinning the job" and "skinning the city" will not be tolerated any longer.

Workmen must be paid 62½ cents an hour, he stated, and contractors employing citizen labor will get the preference under the law.

The lowest bidder will get the contract only if he performs the work satisfactorily and according to specifications, he said.

He told the contractors they were welcome to make as much as they could honestly, but asserted:

"You're not going to live on graft from contracts."

The incident occurred in the mayors' office, to which the contractors had been summoned for a talk in connection with the $8,-000,000 street program.

VACATION IS OVER

Without any preface Mayor Curley launched into his talk.

"The vacation you've been enjoying for four years is all over," he began. "You're going to be honest whether you want to or not. Dishonest contractors are going on the blacklist, dishonest inspectors will be discharged, and it won't do any of you any good if every politician in Boston comes in to speak for you or anybody in Boston including every Rabbi, minister and priest.

"I want the city to get a square deal for as long as I propose to stay here, which is three years. There won't be any more double ticket system. We're going to have a checkup on inspectors, foremen and sub-foremen. During the last four years a few contractors ran the job.

"You've got to pay 62½ cents an hour for labor and contractors who employ citizen labor will get the preference. This is in accordance with the law.

Red, White, Blue Crew Move Coolidges

Northampton, May 16 (INS)—Red, white and blue was the predominating color scheme in the attire of the six husky truckmen who today were moving the belongings of former President Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge from their rented half of a duplex house on Massasoit st. to "The Beeches," a 17-room white painted home the Coolidges purchased.

The moving crew appeared clad in brand new suits of blue and white striped overalls. They wore red felt carpet slippers to protect the highly polished floors in "The Beeches." Each mover was cleanly shaven and barbered. This was all in marked contrast to a usual moving crew—unshaven, frayed overalls and brogans.

First moved were the Coolidge gifts and souvenirs from a storage warehouse. The ex-President personally went to the warehouse and signed the receipts for the transfer. Then he left for his law office. Mrs. Coolidge staying at home ready for the arrival of the five-ton van and immaculate moving crew.

The former President told a group of still and motion picture cameramen that the Coolidge "moving day" must be picturesque. Any cameraman who disobeyed his edict was to be barred from taking interior "shots" at "The Beeches" later.

U.S. CAN NEVER 'SCRAMBLE OUT OF LEAGUE UNHURT,' CHILD WARNS

PLEADS FOR POLITICAL ISOLATION

Entire Nation Hears Former Ambassador's Radio Talk on Foreign Alliances

Washington, May 16 (US)—"Joining any World Court which is an appendage of the League of Nations and taken orders from the League will put us into a hole out of which we will never scramble unhurt."

That was the warning of Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, to patriotic Americans last night. The League Court, he said, is merely the "attorney of the League, handing down opinions at the behest of the father organization."

The talk of the former ambassador was one of the series of patriotic broadcasts under auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution. It was carried over a nation-wide chain of ... National Broadcasting Company.

Child's subject was "Patriotism in America." He declared:

Good patriotism has the propaganding, also. Of these I am only one among millions of Americans. We have no propaganda organization, unless it is that organization known as the United States.

NOT ISOLATIONISTS

We are not isolationists. How can we be? The world from an economic standpoint is being ever more closely knit together into a whole. But politically we are isolationists, from the point of view of many of us, because in contrast to the weaving of a new economic world, the idea of an antique world into which we are to be woven politically is repulsive and without good reason.

We hope our opinion will convince foreign and friendly peoples. America has something new to give the world. It is a clear call—much more clear than the sheer vague and doubtful pact of Paris, much more clear than the empty efforts of the League of Nations to what was, much more clear than our present discussions as to disarmament and naval treaties.

The court is only a court. It is, as I have said before, an attorney for the league. Its opinions and decisions, of course, have no value whatever unless the league by its power to make war, boycott or create public opinion puts decisions and opinions in effect. When we are entangled with a European political-pressure machine, and we are entangled with the absurd minority victim, completely forgetting our real gift to peace.

It is no consequence that our legal experts, our "best minds" of law and international finance—Hughes, Root, Davis, Stimson, and all those great lawyers—have said legally we take no risk under the British, the Cecil Hurst and the Root formula."

Even if this were true that is not the question.

GUARANTEES WORTHLESS

What those legal lights say is that we can object under the court proposal to any advisory opinion in the future. And if we do not wish to stand behind such an "advisory opinion" that we can withdraw without prejudice.

Politically, all that is worth nothing!

Why?

The World Court is the legal advisor of the League.

"If it advises against our interest in behalf of the United States of Europe, we can object and get out.

Not long ago a distinguished American clergyman, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, over the radio, took to task the Daughters of the American Revolution, a society representing among its educational ideas, the idea, as I understand it, that America is to remain unshackled from European political entanglements. Let me quote this as presented to me.

The clergymen who has stepped into politics said in reply to a question as to what he thought of the President's speech to the Daughters of the American Revolution, substantially as follows:

ASSAILS D. A. R.

"I think it was a great statesman-like address. He, the President, said the United States should become a member of the World Court. The reactionary efforts of the Daughters of the American Revolution will fail, and ought to fail. They are not typical of the actions of our intelligent citizenship. We are the authors of the pact of Paris and authors in the beginning of the League of Nations, which we left to others. If we should build a wall around ourselves we should go down to an inglorious end. Let the Daughters of the American Revolution leave statesmanship to the statesmen. Let them devote themselves to the task of erecting memorials to the honored dead of the past."

Upon this statement I received the comment of a distinguished American, and this was the comment:

"Cadman says D. A. R. should leave statesmanship to statesmen and then he proceeds to discuss League Court. When did he become a statesman? A sincere divine would not use a religious hour to discuss politics, but a clergyman doesn't necessarily make a good statesman, especially when he is born in England and is discussing American politics."

Heir to Rockefeller Riches No Spender

Hanover, N. H., May 16 (INS)—Although Nelson Rockefeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is destined to share in one of the world's greatest fortunes, the four-year course at Dartmouth he will complete in June has given him no experience in spending money on a large scale.

His monthly allowance has been just sufficient to cover the necessities of college life. He was not permitted by his father to have an automobile until his senior year.

The grandson of the world's first billionaire has lived in Casque and Gauntlet, one of the inexpensive Dartmouth clubs, which even those in meagre circumstances can afford to join. Young Rockefeller has consistently foreworn the more expensive social events, and only once entertained his fiancee, Miss Mary Todhunter Clark, member of a wealthy Philadelphia family, at a college prom.

NO SPECIAL FAVORS

The clothes of the richest boy at Dartmouth are always inexpensive. Being the heir to a fortune which has become synonymous with fabulous wealth has netted young Rockefeller no special privileges, officials of the college and students agreed today.

Blond, thin, unassuming, he has built up a reputation for industry, democracy, economy, and loyalty. To his legion of friends here he is known as a "Nell" or "Rocky."

Young Rockefeller has never given an interview and he declares he never will until he has done something "on his own" worthy of a statement to the public.

The "richest student" eats at the Rood Club, which is far from exclusive. Mrs. Winona G. Rood, "Mother Rood" by all her "boys," declared Rockefeller is not the least bit fussy over his food but "likes it wholesome."

PRAISED BY DEAN

It has cost "Rocky" less than $1500 a year at Dartmouth—about what the poor student spends.

"Nelson Rockefeller is a most likeable boy," said E. Gordon Hill, dean of freshmen. "The amazing feature of his life here is the fact that he could remain unspoiled in spite of the vast wealth he will inherit. He is a fine, manly, studious boy."

Like his father, Nelson does not drink or smoke. True to Rockefeller tradition, he attends church every Sunday.

On June 23, four days after graduation, he and Miss Clark will wed at Bala, Penn.

FOUR HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Three men and a woman were injured today when the sedan in which they were riding crashed into a truck at the Chelsea end of the Meridian st. bridge.

Miss Marion E. McLaren of 238 Lexington st., East Boston, sister of Ira J. McLaren, driver of the sedan, was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital. She had cuts on the face, nose and over the left eye and was shaken up and bruised.

McLaren and George E. Benner of Trenton st. and Ellsworth E. Massey of White st., both East Boston, were shaken up and bruised.

According to the police, the truck, operated by Harry Lacrita of Eden st., Salem, accompanied by Albert J. Hill of River st., Salem, as a helper, was turning round when the automobile, proceeding from East Boston, struck it.

To Cremate Body of British Novelist

Paris, May 16 (AP)—The body of William J. Locke, British novelist, who died here last night, will be cremated tomorrow in conformity with his last wish.

Locke's ashes will be taken to England, where funeral services will be held Tuesday at St. Martin's in the Field Church, London. Locke, who as a helper, was turning round created "The Beloved Vagabond," died quietly, and never realized that death was approaching.

'Vet' Officials Line Up Poppy Day Plans for May 24

Patients at the United States Veterans Hospital at Bedford have a huge lot of "Buddy Poppies" ready for the drive which gets underway on Saturday, May 24th. Many officials of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and auxiliaries of that body visited the hospital yesterday to make further plans for drive work. In the official group are Max Singer, department commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Mrs. Mary O'Keefe, department commander of the auxiliary; Mrs. Bessie Hanken, national president of the auxiliary; Dr. William M. Dobson of the hospital staff; Mrs. E. Butler, occupational aide at hospital, and Francis X. Cotter, department adjutant. The men sitting are patients at hospital who gladly aid the work. (Staff photo.)

USE FUNDS FOR RELIEF WORK

Plans for the annual Buddy Poppy sale, to be held Saturday, May 24, have been completed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, under the direction of Adjt. Francis X. Cotter.

Sale of the poppies will be made by members of the various posts and auxiliaries, each of whom will wear an official identification button. More than 500,000 of the artificial flowers, symbolic of Flanders Fields, and made by disabled and needy veterans, are expected to be disposed of this year.

Proceeds are devoted to relief activities, a portion being allotted to the maintenance and expansion of the V. F. W. National Home for widows and orphans of ex-service men at Eaton Rapids, Michigan.

The bulk of the money, however, will be used for relief and welfare work among all ex-service men and their dependents. It is pointed out that the number of ex-service men whose health has finally given way as a result of war-time experience, and who are no longer able to be self-supporting, is increasing.

The Gerstein help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the Fun Sent column.

FATE OF TARIFF BILL HANGS ON VOTE TODAY

Democrats Unyielding on Debenture; Hoover's Veto Is Seen

Washington, May 16 (US)—The fate of the $1,000,000,000 Smoot-Hawley tariff bill hung in the balance today as Democratic leaders announced unyielding support of the debenture and the Senate amendment to the flexible provisions.

The test vote will come today, and if the Democrats win, the administration is believed ready to abandon the bill.

President Hoover repeatedly has announced his opposition to the debenture, and unless the Senate votes to strike it from the bill, a presidential veto is expected.

After nearly 18 months of tariff making by Congress, the present plight of the bill is almost unparalleled. Carrying the highest duties in history, the measure has been pulled and hauled and amended so much that even its supporters are now luke-warm in supporting it.

UP TO INSURGENTS

High-tariff senators, like Grundy of Pennsylvania, are disturbed over the huge increases which the bill provides for raw materials used in manufacturing.

The battle today will probably depend on whether the insurgent Republicans remain in the coalition by voting with the Democrats. If they refuse to go along, the administration forces will probably succeed in having debenture eliminated.

Senator Smoot, one of the Republican conferees, will precipitate the battle today by moving to send the tariff bill back for further conference.

ROBINSON FIRM

This will be met by a counter move by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, specially instructing the conferees to insist upon the Senate amendments on the debenture and the flexible provisions. If his motion carries, the impasse will be assured. Senator Harrison said:

"We regard the debenture and flexible provisions as adopted by the Senate vital to the welfare of the American people. We will not recede on them. Every effort has been made to have them retained in the bill and to have them enacted into law.

"We will continue these efforts and bring the contest to the floor of the Senate."

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, backed Harrison in his decision for a showdown. He also pointed out that the Senate was assured of another opportunity to vote on the debenture when the bill went to conference.

NAVAL CHIEFS HIT PACT AS U. S. PERIL

Admirals Demand Parity, Not Given in Treaty; Senate Plans Reservations

Washington, May 16—The general board of the navy dissented vigorously from the London treaty limitations today as a move to attach reservations began to take form i nthe Senate.

Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, head of the borad, told the Senate foreign relations committee that the best thought of the naval establishment favored the building of 8-inch gun cruisers as against the combination of 8-inchers and 6-inchers provided for by the treaty.

He said "No," when asked directly by Senator Robinson, Arkansas, a delegate to the London conference, if the pact established parity with Great Britain.

Echoing the protest presented by Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, Bristol thundered back at questioning senators that the general board, which acts as an advisory body on all naval questions, thought the United States should be permitted to have the type of ship which scientific study had shown to be best for American needs.

ADMIRAL JONES OBJECTS

Meantime Admiral Jones, appearing at a hearing of the naval committee, was reiterating that he regarded the treaty cruiser provisions out of accord with the requirements of national defense, and thought other cdauses of the pact also were objectionable.

A movement to attach reservations to the treaty began to take form in the Senate.

It appeared likely the reservations would deal in part with the flexible clause, under which the United States and Britain and Japan would be permitted to exceed the limitations of the treaty in case any outside power began a threatening building program.

Various members of the naval committee inclined toward a reservation to state more definitely how and in what types of ship the excess building could be done.

ADMIRAL RAPS TREATY

Although some members of the foreign relations committee which has formal custody of the pact, have shown hostility, the majority seemed willing to vote for a favorable report to the Senate.

Meantime, the Foreign Relations Committee was listening to a technical paper, presenting an analysis of naval policy by the Navy General Board. It was read by Admiral Bristol.

The statement recited the board's program after the Washington conference of 1922, which called for 10 new 10,000-ton cruisers, and the recommendation of 1928, which asked for more big cruisers "and no small ships."

It is this program of the general board which Admiral Jones still favors, as against the treaty provision cutting down the number of big 8-inch gun cruisers and substituting 6-inchers.

The statement recalled also that the general board had recommended a 5-5-3 ratio for all categories of ships. This ratio is not applied by the treaty to all types.

"Can anyone doubt that its recommendations represent the best thought of the navy?" Admiral Bristol asked.

Importation of Silver Banned in Mexico

Nogales, Ariz., May 16—Gold may be welcome enough in Mexico in the future, especially American gold, but silver won't be as well received, according to President Ortiz Rubio, who has forbidden the importation of silver in any form into Mexico.

President Rubio

News of the recent injunction against incoming silver reached American bankers in communications from Jose Valenzuela, Mexican consul, who warned that not only were coins forbidden entrance to Mexico but also bullion.

Under a strict interpretation persons entering the country will have to resort to gold carried on their persons or by certificate, if they wish to avoid difficulties at the border. Violations will result in seizure of the silver in addition to substantial fines.

U. S. GOLD STAR MOTHERS NOW IN FRANCE

Royal Reception Given to Women Who Gave Their Sons in Great War

Cherbourg, France, May 16 (AP)—This former wartime port of American debarkation today greeted 231 Gold Star mothers of the United States who arrived on the steamship America.

The liner came into port escorted by two French military planes. An enthusiastic reception was given the party.

The mothers, who are going to visit their sons' graves in France and Belgium, kept about the decks a great deal and only one of the party had a meal in her cabin. Capt. Fried was a pleasant host and not a day passed that he did not receive a group on the bridge and provide plentiful entertainment, concerts and the like.

Every member of the party arrived in fine health and spirits, greatly affected, however, by the tumultuous welcome.

Boston women making the tour include Mrs. F. A. Fales of Norwood, wife of former Sen. F. A. Fales, and Mrs. Blanche U. Eldridge.

Four short addresses were delivered, after which the train departed for Paris where another reception awaited.

A crowd of several thousand on the dock cheered while the mothers slowly disembarked.

There were masses of flowers waiting for them, among which were 14 huge bouquets from Bentley Post, American Legion. There were also many flowers for Mrs. Sarah G. Thompson of New York, who had been elected president of the group on board the ship; Mrs. Eva Lindsey of Bethel, O., dean by virtue of her age, and Mrs. Felipa E. Crespin, Omaha, Neb., the youngest mother in the party. Mrs. Thompson as leader will place a wreath on the grave of the Unknown Soldier tomorrow.

FLAYS TYRANNY IN U. S.

tional Republican administration, and because of the State Republican convention, which is about to assemble in Bellingham on Saturday, May 24.

The editorial in the Seattle Star bears the following headline:

"LIBERTY FOR THE PEOPLE, OR DEATH FOR THE G. O. P."

The text of the editorial follows:

"Give America back to her people. We mean this.

"In the past dozen years meddlers and busybodies 'save imposed on us outrageous interference with our private lives. They have attempted to force these un-American regulations by Cossack methods borrowed from Czarist Russia; by imperialistic tyranny copied from pre-war Russia. They have used State legislatures to bow to their will. They have demanded the imposition of their ideas and steadfastly resisted any attempt of the people as a whole to express an opinion.

"As a result government today is chaotic, oppressive, intolerant. It is leading the people rapidly toward revolution. Probably peaceful, by ballot. Perhaps otherwise. Intolerance in government that began during the war hysteria, fostered and flourished after the peace pact when it should have been stamped out.

"Today our statute books are filled with sumptuary, regulatory laws. Prisons are jammed. Millions of our workers are jobless. Our people are tax-ridden and despondent everywhere. One man in every 11 wears a badge and is fed by huge tax levies to snoop and pry into the private affairs of the rest of us.

"It's time we turned this nation back to the people. Bigger than the prohibition question, bigger than any issue before the American people today is the matter of ridding the United States of fanaticism, Comstockism, snoppery and bigotry in government.

"Republicans must take the lead. It is primarily their responsibility. They should start it Saturday in the State convention at Bellingham.

"Unless the party voluntarily leads a return to American ideals, enforced by American methods, the people themselves will force it, by a ballot-revolution if necessary."

U. S. DEFENSE FROM AIR ATTACK GRAVELY IMPAIRED BY TREATY

CANAL AND PHILIPPINES IN DANGER

No Allowances Made for British and Japanese Aircraft Bases

By Capt. N. H. GOSS, U. S. Navy.

(U. S. Naval Academy, 1905; commanded destroyers and convoy escorts in European war zone during World War; graduate Naval War College; now commanding the U. S. ship Sirius. Captain Goss is a practical sea-going officer who has devoted much study to the subject of sea power and is a well-known writer on naval subjects.)

Aircraft carriers are now limited as follows:

America	Great Britain	Japan
135,000 tons	135,000 tons	81,000 tons

Under 10,000 tons—Unlimited.

The London treaty proposes to limit all aircraft carriers, including those under 10,000 tons to:

America	Great Britain	Japan
135,000 tons	135,000 tons	81,000 tons

This treaty does not limit or restrict aircraft in any way or consider or limit positions available for aircraft bases which the British and Japanese have near and along the route to the Panama Canal and about the Philippines, but does place a further restriction on the aircraft carriers we may build.

TONNAGE REDUCED

Aircraft are not only becoming relatively more important all the time, but the increasing power and radius of aircraft makes aircraft carriers more important. This is of interest not only to the navy but to the country in general, because increased aircraft efficiency inherently indicates that the first line of air defense must be the navy.

As an example New York can no longer safely be defended from Mitchel Field, and in increasing measure must rely on naval aircraft based on ships well offshore.

The treaty limit on aircraft carriers, established at the Washington conference, permits us five carriers in addition to the Lexington and Saratoga.

In order to get as many more carriers inside the treaty limit as possible, the one new carrier we have authorized has been reduced in size to a little under 14,000 tons, for all flight decks are extremely vulnerable and it is not well to carry too many eggs in one basket. Also different places and different needs have to be covered by more units.

SURPRISE BY AIR

Due to such material reduction in size, however, the new carrier and sisters that may follow her, cannot have the extreme speed of the two Saratogas or their elaborate and complete underwater protection. All small carriers will be vulnerable to attack by mines, torpedoes and bombs as well as gun fire.

At present, aircraft carriers under 10,000 tons are unlimited. While vessels this small would not be as useful as larger vessels, it should be remembered that if lightly built a considerable number of planes can be carried on a vessel under 10,000 tons.

Of particular importance, respecting the defense of the Panama Canal, are the British possessions in the Caribbean along the direct route to Panama. It should be understood that the element of surprise is easier to obtain, and more deadly in effect, with aircraft than any other weapon except, possibly, submarines, so that great dispersal of effort is necessary to protect a number of threatened points.

DEFENSE IMPAIRED

Considering the British positions along our route to the Panama Canal, which are not limited in the way our own island possessions are in the Far East, the air defense of the approaches to the Panama Canal, and of the canal itself as well, would become a serious matter.

For these reasons the London treaty would materially lower our potential air strength and would reduce our relative air strength compared with Great Britain or Japan.

This is not compensated for by a further provision in the proposed treaty permitting 25 per cent of cruisers to carry aircraft landing decks because no vessel can function efficiently as two types.

RADIO AIDS HUB PLANE IN FOG

Both sections of the Newark-Boston airmail were delayed today when the planes flew into a fog blanket over Connecticut.

The sleup enabled the first section, a Pitcairn plane with Gus Graf at the controls, to show the modern strides in air-to-earth communication.

Graf flashed the message that he was lost and was trying to find Bethany Field. The message was picked up at New Haven and flashed to the airport office of the weather bureau in Boston.

The plane was found over Beacon Falls, and by radio guidance was enabled to land safely at Hartford. Graf was relieved and Pilot Sebastian Pond continued the flight to Boston.

The second section, with Pilot Veblen in the cockpit, radio she was forced down at Wallingford on the trip from Newark and was waiting a lift in the fog.

Mother of Spalding, Violinist, Is Dead

Paris, May 16 (AP)—A 6000-word questionnaire and outline on the constitution of a "European federal union," prepared by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, will be delivered to the governments of 26 members of the League of Nations tomorrow.

All other nations of the world, including Russia, will receive copies later, it was announced.

The copy for the United States already has gone forward and probably will arrive Monday in Washington.

It has been said many times here and elsewhere that when war starts it will come from the air. With us that is still theory.

It isn't theory in India, where British airmen have been bombing rebellious tribes along the northwest frontier.

That's so much simpler than marching on the ground, running the risk of being shot by natives, as the British were compelled to do before flying came.

ENGLERT FIGHTS HIS OUSTER

John P. Englert, charged by the Finance Commission with being a falsifier, will fight removal from the office of superintendent of public buildings by Mayor James M. Curley, it was reported today.

While refusing to make a statement pending action by the mayor, Englert is said to be planning a battle to retain the office to which he was originally appointed by Mayor Curley in 1924.

He is known to have many political friends, including former President Coolidge and Gov. Allen, together with members of the Legislature.

Mayor Curley was away from City Hall during the morning, attending a funeral, and was expected to take up the Englert case later.

It was also considered possible that he might effect a shakeup in the staff of the department of public buildings.

SEEK FUNDS FOR PRISON FIRE TRAP DRIVE

Governor Is Asked to Aid Norfolk Project; 75 Convicts Taken From Charlestown

With 75 inmates already transferred to Norfolk, the move to eliminate the hazards at State Prison revealed by the Boston Evening American was gaining momentum today.

Legislators and prominent citizens joined a drive to obtain money with which to facilitate the transfer of more inmates from Charlestown to the prison colony.

They plan to petition Governor Allen to increase the supplementary budget appropriation for the construction of the institution at Norfolk.

The supplementary budget provides only $125,000 for construction work at Norfolk for the balance of the year, and it is contended this amount should be materially increased.

Official recognition of the Boston Evening American's exclusive expose of Charlestown prison as an antiquated fire trap was made when authorities transferred 25 inmates to Norfolk.

Fifty were removed from Charlestown yesterday and 25 the day before, and it is hoped that others will follow.

Representative Joseph Finnegan of Dorchester asked the rules committee to suspend rules so that his resolve providing for an investigation leading to speedy removal of prisoners from Charlestown to Norfolk can be introduced.

He painted a striking picture of conditions at Charlestown as he found them, asserting that a fire would result in serious and, in many cases, fatal injuries to more than 50 per cent of the 887 inmates.

While commending the warden and his assistants for the splendid work they are doing under difficult conditions, he told the committee that the hopeless environment, lack of sanitation and the ever-present fire hazard in the antiquated structure are insurmountable.

"Thumber" Who Fails His Definition of a Pedestrian

"I'm a pedestrian," declared Mayor Arthur Laver Clarke of Malden, England, speaking before the Malden Rotary Club at its luncheon yesterday.

"I am not sure you people know what a pedestrian is. You have so many motor cars that I'm quite certain there are very few, if any, pedestrians in New England. I am one.

"I do not own a motor car and I have never owned one and since I came here to Malden as the guest of your city, I have ridden more miles in motor cars than I have ridden in my whole life before. When I get back home and about my duties I am sure there will be many times when I shall wish some of my Malden friends would come along in their luxurious motor cars and, as you American say, 'give me a lift!' I have even learned what a 'thumber' is. An unsuccessful 'thumber' is a

NEWTON SHOWS 19,241 GAIN

The census of Newton was announced today as 85,295, an increase of 19,241, or 46.1 per cent.

Brockton, May 16 (AP)—Census returns today showed the town of Holbrook has 3351 residents, a gain of 190 in 10 years.

Greenfield, May 16 (AP)—The town of Ware suffered a severe loss in population during the past ten years, census returns today showed. Ware now has 7366 residents, a loss of 1159.

Lowell, May 16 (AP)—One of the largest census gains recorded in New England, 64.6 went today to the town of Burlington, which since 1920 has gained 837 inhabitants for a total of 1722.

Warwick, R. I., May 16 (AP)—The census figures for this city were announced today as follows: 23,011, an increase of 9530, or 70.6 per cent.

COUNCIL'S PAY BILL MOVES UP

The Senate today refused to kill the bill passed by the House permitting the Boston City Council to raise the salary of its own members from $1500 to $2000 a year.

Senator James A. Torrey of Beverly contended that the salary raise is a change in the city charter and should be placed before the voters on a referendum. He moved that the bill be referred to the next annual session.

Senator Henry J. Parkman, Jr., of Boston said he had no recollection of the salary increase put through for the members of the General Court being referred to the people.

The bill was then given a third reading.

Sues Couple for $50,000 for Love

Nashua, N. H., May 16 (AP)—Mrs. Lynette D. Baker of Wilton today filed suit here for $50,000 against Mr. and Mrs. Fordyce Coburn, also of Wilton, alleging they alienated the affections of her 17-year-old daughter, Lynette.

Mrs. Baker said the Coburns sought to destroy the confidence and affections of the girl for her mother and persuaded her to leave home and live with them.

Favors Dry Law Repeal

STATE OPTION IS MORROW'S CAMPAIGN CRY

Senate Candidate Would Repeal Eighteenth Amendment, With U. S. Aid for Dry States

Newark, N. J., May 16 (INS)—Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico, business man and father-in-law of Charles A. Lindbergh, today embarked on what may or may not be a national political career with a specific declaration of his stand on prohibition, behind him.

In his baptismal campaign speech for the Republican nomination for United States senator from New Jersey, Morrow called for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. He asserted that conditions were "deplorable" after 10 years of federal prohibition administration and said that the question was a problem of government rather than one of moral principles.

LEAGUE OPENS WAR.

The New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, through its head, the Rev. Dr. James K. Shields, lost no time in declaring war against the Morrow candidacy.

"The contention of Mr. Morrow that the states can be induced to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment is bunk," today said Dr. Shields. "Large sections of the country will not permit the amendment to be changed. The Anti-Saloon League won its spurs by fighting. It needs nothing more than a good stiff fight, and now it has the opportunity.

"I think Mr. Morrow went the limit and left the people in no doubt as to his stand on prohibition—a commendable thing."

Dr. Shields also declared that the league would fight the candidacy of former Senator Joseph S. Freylinghuysen.

It was predicted today by political observers that Representative Franklin W. Fort of East Orange would soon enter the contest as a dry. Fort had recently stated that his plans depended on the prohibition stand Morrow might take on his first public utterance.

WANTS STATE OPTION.

Morrow's political manifesto calling for state control of liquor differs sharply from the wet platform announced by his leading opponent, former Senator Joseph S. Freylinghuysen. The latter, who turned wet after being a political dry for 10 years, advocated a change in the prohibition laws under some form of federal control. He is expected to reveal details of his control plan later in the campaign.

In his address, Morrow referred to the "resentment, lawlessness and corruption" arising from prohibition.

"I believe that the way out of the present difficulty is to recognize clearly the fundamental difference between the nature of the federal government and the states government," he said.

AID FOR DRY STATES

"I believe this involves a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and substitution therefor of an amendment which will restore to the states the power to determine their policy toward the liquor traffic, and vest in the federal government power to give it possible protection and assistance to those states that desire complete prohibition against invasion from the states that do not.

"If I should be elected to the United States Senate I should be prepared to vote for a resolution submitting to the several states an amendment to the constitution in any form that would accomplish the foregoing purpose."

Capital Waits to Observe Reaction to Morrow Speech

Washington, May 16—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow's declaration for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the return of liquor control to the states produced a somewhat mixed reaction in political circles here today, with members of Congress and prohibition and anti-prohibition leaders rather hesitant as to just what comment, if any, to make.

There was a decided tendency to wait and see what impression it would make on the country before political leaders would go very far in stating their own views.

The only reaction from dry quarters came from Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who characterized Morrow's pronouncement as the "same wet program as sponsored by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment."

Senator Tydings (D.) of Maryland, anti-prohibition leader in the upper branch of Congress, declared that Morrow did not make himself clear as to whether he would take the initiative in seeking to bring about the repeal of the amendment.

BILODEAU BACKS STRANDWAY

Favorable action of a resolve authorizing the Metropolitan District Commission to study construction of a strandway along the East Boston waterfront was urged at a hearing before the House ways and means committee today by Thomas H. Bilodeau, Boston legislative agent.

The strandway, the initial cost of which is estimated at $1,000,000, would start near Neptune rd., extend along the Narrow Gauge tracks and Bayswater st. at Orient Heights, to the Winthrop bridge.

FIND GIRL'S LEG IN CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge police inspectors, under Capt. Patrick Hurley, were today probing the mystery in the finding of a girl's leg, cut off above the knee, in a dump off Smith pl. North Cambridge.

The limb was found by workmen employed at the dump, who notified the police.

Medical Examiner David C. Dow, who was notified, stated today that he doubted that the leg could have been discarded by a medical school. It said that the amputation was probably done by a person only slightly versed in the science of surgery.

Police officers were investigating a report that an automobile had been seen near the dump on Monday night by two men whose names are being withheld.

Evicts Wrong Family, So It Costs $500 in Suit

Detroit, May 16 (AP)—When Constable Arthur Terry gets an order to evict household goods he doesn't fool.

He got an order to remove the effects from a residence the other day, so he rolled up his sleeves and started in. He tossed furniture and antiques out the windows, tore up bedding and evicted everything in sight, including the canary. Just to show he really knew his business, he went down in the basement and shoveled five tons of coal onto the street.

"Well, I sure cleaned out that place at 18,641 Albany ave.," he reported to Samuel L. Mays, court commissioner.

"What! 18,641 Albany?" said the commissioner. "I told you to go to 18,106 Caldwell ave."

"What! 18,106 Caldwell?" said the constable. "I guess I made a slight mistake. Excuse it please."

Terry did such a good job of evicting the wrong family that it took three days to gather the household effects together again, and a jury decided the constable's work ought to be worth $500 to the wrongly-evicted family.

Rushed Automobile Victim to Hospital

Owing to a hasty police report of the circumstances of the fatality, the name of Samuel Carlits of Bainbridge st., Roxbury, was given as the operator of the machine which killed Delia Flynn of Fulda st., Roxbury, when, as a matter of fact, he humanely rushed her to the hospital after the accident.

The Boston Evening American regrets the inaccuracy of the report and is glad to publish this correction.

IPSWICH FIRE LOSS $10,000

Ipswich, May 16—The Ipswich Opera House, in the heart of the business section, and another two-story wooden office building adjoining, were badly damaged by fire early today. Damage was estimated by the police at more than $10,000.

The fire destroyed the new talking picture machine, which was installed only a few months.

Mrs. Annie Fall was assisted to the street from the second floor of the office building, where she lives, by police officers.

Mrs. Lillian Haskell's hairdressing parlor on the second floor of this building was badly damaged by water and smoke. Dr. Fred Wilder's dentist's office, also on the second floor, and the Ipswich Co-operative Bank on the first floor were both damaged badly by smoke and water. A confectionery parlor, conducted by Lamproparious and Galasis, suffered heavy damage.

Police said, following an investigation, that students of Manning high school attended a concert by the school glee club in the opera house. It is probable, police said, that some one threw a lighted cigarette to the floor.

PEACE MOVE IN INDIA COMING

Bombay, India, May 16 (AP)—Indian peace prospects brightened today when announcement was made in liberal quarters of an early expected government move for negotiations with Mahatma Gandhi, civil disobedience prisoner.

A Government meeting at Bombay and a secret session of the All-India Congress, held simultaneously, presaged decisive action in some direction, it was declared, before the week end.

While these reports were going abroad, Mme. Sarojini Naidu, successor of the Mahatma, and Abbas Tyabji, were arrested early today for attempting a salt raid at Dharasana and shortly afterward at liberty. Mme. Naidu and her band of volunteers had sat in the road outside of the village since yesterday forenoon, when halted by police.

The Weather

For Boston and vicinity—Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; possibly followed by showers and cooler late Saturday; moderate westerly winds becoming variable; moderately high humidity; slight change in forest fire hazard.

For Southern New England—Increasing cloudiness tonight, probably followed by showers and cooler Saturday; moderate westerly winds becoming variable.

For Northern New England—Fair, not quite so cool in Maine and New Hampshire tonight; Saturday increasing cloudiness, probably followed by showers and cooler; moderately westerly winds becoming variable.

For Eastern New York—increasing cloudiness tonight, probably followed by showers and cooler Saturday; moderate westerly winds becoming variable.

OCEAN FORECAST.

Steamers departing today for European ports will have moderate to fresh westerly winds and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

Massachusetts subscribed $17,000, New York more than $5000 and Illinois $1250. A $25 contribution was received from Japan.

PRINCE IN ROLE OF SAMARITAN

London, May 16 (AP)—The Prince of Wales today played the Samaritan to an injured man while en route to Sandwich to witness the golf matches.

The prince was motoring to the Hendon airdrome to take a plane for Sandwich when, from his motor car, he saw men bending over an unconscious man by the roadside. The prince ordered his car stopped, alighted, took a cushion from the car and with great care placed it under the insensible man's head.

The prince applied his handkerchief to the victim's bleeding face and, after seeing that medical help had been summoned, drove on. Witnesses said the prince was most solicitous of the injured man's welfare.

The victim had been badly hurt in a fall off his motorcycle.

What! Pour Water On The Radiator?

In the calm old days when an automobile was merely a horseless carriage steered by a "tiller"— when with feverish haste you could change a tire in two hours—and when you used to twit yourself with the thought that in spite of old- Dobbin's shortcomings you didn't have to pour hot water on him to get him started on cold mornings—then you might easily match a "Dartford" value. But since then, alas, costs and prices have risen like a young lawyer with a political pull—until today the "Dartford" is a blazing light upon the horizon of economy.

RULES GOVERNING AWARDS

1. Beginning Monday, May 19, every day, including Sunday, for twenty-nine days, a message will be broadcast over Stations WNAC and WHDH, from which a word or words will be omitted. On the thirtieth day no message will be broadcast and contestants will supply their own message. Everyone is invited to receive these messages and locate the missing word or words with the help of a clue in the form of a picture published in the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser. This picture will illustrate the missing word. On the thirtieth or last message the picture alone will be published and entrants will supply their own messages to fit the picture.

2. $500 in cash will be paid by the American and Advertiser to readers who send in the nearest correct and complete sets of solutions to the thirty messages, and other valuable awards will be made.

3. Everyone residing in New England is allowed to participate in these awards except employes of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, their immediate relatives and families.

4. Hold all messages until you have the complete set of thirty (30). Then send them all in together in one package addressed to the Radio Mystery Message Editor, Boston American-Advertiser, 5 Winthrop Square, P. O. Box 156, Boston, Mass., within the period to be specified later in this newspaper.

5. Messages used may be extracts from speeches of famous men and women, from correspondence or other suitable sources, and each extract will be matter of known record and the missing word must be the exact word used in the original message.

6. Each package sent in must be fully prepaid, first class postage. Packages received with insufficient postage will not be considered. You may send in as many sets as you wish, but no person will be entitled to more than one award.

7. In case there are no complete sets of correct solutions submitted, awards will be given to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment. In case where the solutions to the twenty-nine messages are identical, awards will be made on the basis of judgment, exact accuracy and skill in supplying the thirtieth or final message.

Thus the 29 messages most nearly correct, and the last or ORIGINAL MESSAGE deemed the best, will win the principal award.

8. The Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the Plan and the decision of the Tercentenary Radio Mystery Message Editor on any questions which may arise will be absolutely final and the entering of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations made now or to be made.

PICTURE CLUE NO. 6 IN TOMORROW'S BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

CAGLE TAKES BRIDE BACK TO LOUISIANA

New York, May 16—"Very happy and confident of their future, Christian Keener Cagle, who was forced to resign from West Point when it became known that he was married, and his wife are going back home to Louisiana.

A hotel press agent said that Cagle had talked to him over the phone and, after dictating a brief statement, said: "Well, we're on our way," which the press agent took to mean that the football star and his wife were taking a train immediately for the South.

Cagle continued today his policy of avoiding reporters and camera men, adopted when he slipped away from West Point while newspapermen were in a conference with academy officials and meeting Mrs. Cagle at some secret rendezvous.

Cagle's statement follows:

"I left West Point with the deepest regret and with the highest respect and admiration for the officers under whom I served, and the corps of cadets. Mrs. Cagle and I are going home to Louisiana, and in September I shall take up my duties as football coach at the Mississippi A. & M.

"Everything else for the future is so indefinite that it is impossible to say any more about our plans at present. Mrs. Cagle and I are happy, and look forward with confidence to our future."

Four Persons Hurt in Auto Collision

Marlboro, May 16—Four persons were seriously injured, two of them women, when two automobiles collided on the State highway near the Williams Tavern today. Both machines were wrecked.

A car operated by Frederick A. Hoxie, of Berlin, going toward Boston, collided with a car operated by Clifton W. Russell, Northboro.

Miss Juanita Ferris, 25, of 6 Fayette st., Boston, who was riding with Hoxie, was injured about the knees, arms and face. Mrs. Claire Marshall, who was riding with her husband, suffered serious injuries to her back and side.

Hoxie told the police he lost control of his car.

"THE BIG HOUSE" IS THRILLING

In "The BIG House," beginning in The Boston Evening American next Monday, Jack Lait will tell you the real reasons and all the reasons for the crisis in the American penal situation. You can't afford to miss a word of this tremendous thrilling story—set forth in the form of fiction—but NEWS of vital import to every American. Begin it at the beginning—next Monday in The Boston Evening American.

Trying Again

Harry Thaw, who was refused admission to England two years ago, is bound for that country again today.

Fine Greek Pastor on Liquor Charge

Nashua, N. H., May 16 (AP)—Rev. A. G. Thalassitis of the Holy Cross Church (Greek), Manchester today was fined $100 and costs and given a suspended sentence of 60 days in jail when arraigned in municipal court on a charge of transporting liquor. He pleaded not guilty.

THAW CRASHES BRITISH GATES

New York, May 16 (AP)—Harry K. Thaw, who on his last visit abroad was refused admittance to England, is on board the Ile de France today in another attempt to crash that country's gate.

He referred questioners to William Glynnon, a playwright, who said:

"Mr. Thaw doesn't have to fear anything on the part of British officialdom under the new ministry."

At the time of his exclusion two years ago it was contended Thaw was a foreigner who committed an act for which he might be extradited.

London, May 16 (AP)—The home office declined today to comment on the attitude it would take toward Harry K. Thaw, who has left New York bound for England.

Four Italian Cities Alarmed by Quake

Catanzaro, Italy, May 16 (AP)—A strong earthquake shock, followed by a smaller one, was felt here today. Similar tremors alarmed the populations of Nicastro, Soveria, Simeri and Taverna. The people fled to the streets. No damage or casualties were reported.

HEARST MEDAL GIVEN TEAM

New Bedford, May 16—Led by a 100-piece band and the R. O. T. C. unit of the school, the prize-winning rifle team of New Bedford High School today was awarded the William Randolph Hearst medals and plaque for its place in the Hearst shoot, eastern section, junior unit.

The awards were presented by a representative of Mr. Hearst, the medals being pinned on by four girl sponsors of the team. A plaque, for exhibition in the corridors of the school, was accepted by Headmaster Walter Williams and Allen P. Keith, chairman of the school board.

The R. O. T. C. unit formed at the school and paraded to Barney Field, with the winning team in the honor position in line.

Capt. Eusebe Choquette, Ralph Metcalf, Guy Frederick, Jack Londin and Alton Tripp were the members of the team that captured third prize. The team was one of three entered by the school this year. Its score was higher than the winning team last year, but a better class of shooting by the other schools forced the team into third place.

Kathryn Coffey, Blanche Biron, Ethel Birtwistle and Ruth Chase pinned the medals on the uniforms of the boys immediately after the official presentation. The ceremony took place after the annual federal inspection of the unit by Col. Harry Wilbur, officer in charge.

Flashes of Life

By the Associated Press.

SARTORIAL.

SANDWICH, England—Here's a tip to the golfer who would be well dressed: Watching Bobby Jones play, the Prince of Wales wore plus fours of chocolate red and beige checks with a brown and white checked cap, brown and beige socks. He carried an umbrella of red and white checks.

CHAUFFEURETTE.

LONDON—One lady who has been presented at court has a woman chauffeur and a woman footman, both liveried. They attracted about as much attention as the debutantes on the way to last night's function.

BULL.

MADRID — Sydney Franklin, Brooklyn's bullfighter, has a kind face. It so impressed John Hays Hammond that he doubled it. Franklin was a bullfighter. "You just ought to see my face when a bull is trying to get me," explained Franklin.

WORK.

NEW LONDON, Ct.—Secretary Mellon, like Roosevelt, is against a life of ignoble ease. Addressing the graduating class of the Coast Guard Academy, he said: "No man worth while wants an easy life when there is real work to be done in the world."

POOR PEGGY.

NEW YORK—Peggy Joyce has gone to Europe disappointed. She loves lilacs, but not one was sent her by an admirer. Instead her stateroom was filled with orchids. "And lilacs are so cheap!" she sighed.

SLIPS.

NEW YORK—A lot of folks are hurt slipping in the bathtub. Of 6585 cases of non-fatal accidental injuries treated by 22 Visiting Nurse Associations last year 46 per cent occurred at home.

Quincy to Build Pacific Liners

Mayor Curley to Lay Keel of First of Two Matson Ships Tomorrow

Construction of two new Pacific Coast liners will be started in the Bethlehem yards in Quincy tomorrow, providing work for thousands.

The keel of the first of the twin 26,000-ton ships will be laid at 2 o'clock by Mayor James M. Curley, who will drive a bolt handfashioned from iron taken from the old Constitution.

The second ship will be started within a few weeks and both will be delivered to the Matson line in about 22 months.

The contract was awarded to the Quincy concern largely because of the reputation of New England ship builders, it is understood.

These ships are to be express mail liners between San Francisco and Sydney, via Honolulu and other ports. Each will cost about $8,000,000, with nine decks, 16 watertight compartments, double bottoms and accommodations for 620 first-class passengers and 217 tourists.

The keel laying ceremony will be similar to that of clipper ship days. There will be many distinguished visitors, among them Congressmen and Shipping Board commissioners.

A huge crowd is expected, as this ceremony will also mark the official opening of Quincy's tercentenary celebration.

Longshoreman's Gazette

CARL MORRISON, Editor

Vol. 2 No. 14

Who is the editor of the Longshoreman's Gazette?

This seems to be the subject of controversy along the waterfront. We're going to settle the question once for all.

Some harbor workers have the idea that one or two longshoremen's union officials are on the payroll of the Gazette to furnish news items. This idea doubtless grew from the humorous announcement of the Gazette editor of his staff of "special writers," "cub reporters," and other assistants.

It pains us to say this, but the editor himself does all the work. When the stories are interesting, he can take the praise. When they are "punk" he can not fire the cub reporter, the chief relaxation of editors.

This explanatory "exposure" of our little bit of fun is given merely to protect the union officials, whose sole connection with the column is reading it—we hope.

A Special Cop

Charlie McGinn holds the distinction of being the only policeman among the longshoremen. In the summer he is a special cop at Revere, keeping the flying horses in order.

Harbor Songster

We have heard of another harbor songster. "Pierce" Delahanty, of radio fame, who works for Martin Costello, of E. S. Booth Co., is an excellent tenor. He has toured several states.

Today's Who's Who

Today's sketch of harbor figures concerns Capt. Mortimer Nickerson, veteran of the Boston Tow Boat Co.

Hachmuth Photo
Capt. Nickerson

Captain Nickerson is one of a dozen tug boat masters who do the delicate job of bringing Bo Levi into dry dock. He is an all-round good scout and versatile to the extreme.

For instance Captain Nick is a crack bowler, a good yachtsman, and a keen duck hunter.

He is famous for his poetry and sea-faring stories, as well as for his unbeatable (may be the typesetters will make that "unetable" and still do no harm) "cool stew."

This captain once went through an explosion in a ship and was too tough for Davy Jones. His diversion in the past has been getting tipped overboard from small boats and being fished out with a pitchfork like so much cod.

Captain Nick has done some notable wrecking work in his day.

Today's Safety Rule

Rule No. 15 of the marine safety code is as follows:

"The winch shall not be used to hoist men aloft to work on booms or derricks. Such men shall be hoisted by hand power only; otherwise booms shall be lowered to deck for changing gear or making necessary repairs."

YALE NEWS HITS DEAN'S RULING

New Haven, Conn., May 16 (AP)—Yale Daily News, undergraduate newspaper, today described the sentence given by the dean's office to 91 academic students yesterday for participation in the disturbance a week ago, as "curiously left-handed and pointless punishment." It said that obviously the intent was to make an example of a few in order to impress the undergraduate body as a whole.

Fourteen students, of whom 12 are seniors about to take final examinations, were suspended from recitations, and 16 were denied dormitory privileges next year.

"Why Did They Sell Killarney?" Means Something Now

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 16 (AP)—That famous old music hall song, "Why Did They Sell Killarney?" promises to have new popularity.

The Irish Times today announced that the Earl of Kenmare proposed to sell his whole Ireland estate of 10,000 acres and sporting rights of more than 100,000 acres. The estate includes also fishing rights on the River Flesk and other rivers and lakes.

Killarney, one of Ireland's famous beauty spots, is visited every summer by many Americans. The Earl intends to live in England.

SIMPSON RITES TOMORROW

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, Brookline, for Hiram Le Roy Simpson, vice-president and general sales manager of the United Drug Co., who died yesterday of pneumonia following a heart attack at his home at Quincie rd., Wahan.

Simpson, following his graduation from Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in 1896, began his career as a druggist at Waterville, Me. In 1909 he joined the sales force of the United Drug Co., and in 1915 was made vice-president.

Will Apologize

Amsterdam, May 16 (UE)—Poultney Bigelow, American historian and World War enemy of the ex-Kaiser's, will arrive in Doorn tomorrow to apologize to the former emperor for what Bigelow now believes to be false accusations.

Pershing and Edge Inspect Memorials

Paris, May 16 (AP)—Ambassador Walter E. Edge and Gen. Pershing today announced that they would tour the French battlefields next Monday and Tuesday to inspect the memorials erected or being erected by the battle monuments commission. The tour will include Belleau Wood, Chateau Thierry, Epernay, Romagne, Montfaucon, Verdun, Thiaucourt and Montsec.

College Delegation to Visit Schools

Representatives of 18 New England colleges will visit Middlesex County schools Tuesday and Wednesday to explain to parents the advantages of college education for their children. LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

Blames Radio for Mental Indigestion

Editor Boston American:

There's a new idea going over the air. It is this: radio makes for mental indigestion, just as eating too much leads to physical indigestion. So the professors of mental hygiene are saying.

Dr. R. Sommer, professor of psychiatry at the University of Giessen, chairman of General Association for Mental Hygiene, is authority for this mental indigestion through the radio.

He maintains that the radio allows one to be exposed to a great number of impressions. If people are temperate in listening to music and lectures and do not try to take in a short time an international mixture from all sorts of cities, the radio will not be injurious to the mind.

There's always something to take the joy out of life. Now it's the radio.

Easier to Fall Out of Love Than In

Editor Boston American:

It was said in Boston a week ago at a meeting on Joy st. by a representative woman that: It is easier to fall out of love with a man than to fall in love with him.

I have been thinking this over. There is a great deal of truth in it, though it would not do to stretch it too far. Men like to be admired more than women. The more they are coddled, the more their eyes open with delight.

Women today are understanding the men better than ever before. They think they are more unmanly, illogical and morose than their fathers. They are lacking in making love. Their fathers were past masters in that. It is so true that a woman cannot love the average man if she knows him. With the old codgers is passing much of the love of fifty years ago, which was so romantic over the love that is sprinkled around these days.

Tells Ministers How to Sell Religion

Editor Boston American:

A Boston publicity man told ministers this week how to sell religion. His talk was full of sparks. They must have fired many clerical minds present with new ideas. Don't put on your bulletin board: "Wanted 100 men to join the church brotherhood. That is not the way to get results," he said. "Rather say, 100 men are going to join the brotherhood. Then work like sixty to get them. If you are selling mattresses, bedsprings, don't harp on this end, say you sell sleep."

Don't let people get it into their heads, that you must drive them to church. Make it a joy to be there."

"You can't make a horse drink, but you can make him thirsty. Sell salvation. It is the best commodity on the market."

These are some of the sparks that brightened the deliverance of his address. Like all publicity men, he was more like a summer thunder storm than a summer breeze and it was well that it was so.

Are Men's Heads Growing Larger?

Editor Boston American:

Are men's heads growing larger in Boston?

If you can believe the measurements, pasted in hats, you must think this way. There are very few 6¾ hats in Boston. All I looked at were in the seven grade and beyond.

There are very few men who wear smaller sizes in hats in Boston, but 20 years ago this smaller size was more in evidence.

I am told that the average American today wears 7¼. Presidents of the United States never wore a 6¾ hat. Here are some of the presidential sizes: Garfield 7¾, Lincoln 7½, Taft 7¾, Roosevelt and Harding 7⅜, Wilson and Grant 7⅛, Coolige 7¼. But as I wear 6¾ I can be classed with the present Prince of Wales of England who wears 6¾.

Public Warming to Tercentenary

Editor Boston American:

The tide is turning in Boston toward a more general observance of the Tercentenary. More people are getting warm over it. The former indifference is now crippled. This is largely due to the women and the younger generation. Schools have done their share. Club men are talking about it. Churches are lending a hand. The coming of the Anniversary Week of the Ligurians will open Sunday with an address of importance.

Dr. C. E. E. Park of the First Church, Boston, will speak on "Early Days of the Puritans in Boston." He will give something startling and awaken more attention. It takes a good deal to arouse Bostonians, but when they get going they leave nothing undone to show that Boston started everything at the beginning of the United States.

He Urges Turn to Nursing Bottles for Home Brew

Editor Boston American:

Is it possible that the United States Supreme Court can occupy itself with such trivial matters as corks, caps and bottles and tell the people not to make them or sell them any more lest they fall under the ban of the bootlegger?

What are we going to do about it? I see only one way out of this dilemma, i. e., use nursing bottles, until they also are prohibited. Surely, the national foolishness, prohibition, is becoming more foolish every day. When will the country be delivered from this plague?

Lauds Editorial Attack on Dr. Cadman

Editor Boston American:

Many of your readers, no doubt, read with pleasure your editorial against the policy of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman in his attacks upon the Daughters of the Revolution.

These patriotic women are opposed to foreign entanglements. They are not in favor of the World Court or the League of Nations. They have their views and they are well supported.

Now Dr. Cadman comes along and thinks that women need advice. No doubt they do, but not on this vital question. They, in all probability, have given more consideration to it in all its angles than the radio preacher. They are true Americans, because they remember some events in the past of American history. These Dr. Cadman has overlooked. My advice to the genial doctor is that he stick to his last. He is a good radio preacher. He must remain there, for when he undertakes to advise women about a matter that they have given careful consideration to, he is stepping around in a pool of advice. We agree with Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Col. Frank Smith of Illinois, both opponents of the World Court. Dr. Cadman is woefully inconsistent with some remarks he made over the radio some time ago. Verify your references, doctor!

JANE R. SMITH.

Raw Food Eaters On the Increase

Editor Boston American:

Boston is getting more raw food eaters. Their number has perceptibly increased in the last 12 months. They are ringing their notes on George Bernard Shaw. Shaw is essentially a model with them. He does not drink intoxicants or even stimulants like tea or coffee. He has no bad habits. He does not eat meat. He never swears. He is essentially austere, ascetic, astringent and antiseptic. Above all he never smokes. Can you beat all this?

What does he get out of it—eating mostly raw food? Personally, I could not live that way. But he does and claims he has a clear mind. He can think out anything that he wants to think. The Boston raw food eaters are never sick. They never had appendicitis or indigestion. They like nuts just as much as squirrels. There is one of these disciples here in Boston from Lewiston, Idaho. There is a nest of them in that town. Some are coming to Boston to give us a raw deal. Oh! but it is well to know how others live and you know that Boston is the hub of fads, isms, freaks and readjustments to other types of life.

MICHAEL N. SWEENEY.

Urges Broadcast of Undesirable Citizens

Editor Boston American:

Is there any city or town that publishes a list of its undesirable citizens, outside of Chicago? The Windy City has 28 so designated. This is a revival of the Puritan idea, for undesirable citizens and those in debt had their names pasted on a board for the purpose of humiliating them. It is like the black list of club members, still continued today in Boston clubs, who are in arrears.

Say! Some of these Puritans had loathsome ideas. They knew how to squeeze you when they wanted to do this trick. I have to read about their old customs.

I believe it is a good idea for every man who can, to raise a beard for the observance of Tercentenary, like Michael Sullivan of Dorchester.

J. T. CALLAHAN.

Now Methodists Drop "Obey" and "Serve"

Editor Boston American:

It has at last been done. It would have been better if it had been done quickly. The Southern Methodist body have now dropped from their marriage service the word "obey" as part of the bride's promise in that service. They have also cut out the word "serve." These two words were put in the marriage service by the Puritans. They were slow to give women any rights at all. During this Tercentenary year this should be more than ever commented upon. The King's Chapel prayer book, second edition, 1811, used by the Boston Unitarians, was the first religious body to run the blue pencil through these two words in the marriage service. The Episcopalians followed suit in their prayer book of 1929.

This is one of the blots on the early prayer books of the beginning of the 19th century. Now that the Puritan influence in this respect has been dethroned from the marriage service, let us get down to brass tacks and find out what the Puritans did besides a general fault finding.

N. K. O'NEIL.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

A contributor writes, "Will to be well."

That's good psychology, but many who read it will say, "If I have pneumonia or a fractured bone, try and will that away."

True—but the fact remains every thought is registered in the subconscious mind, becomes a part of us and is perpetuated into eternity.

Schopenhauer, the great philosopher, said: "Man is the mechanical expression of inherent and past environment." It should be clear, however, that the human machine should be guided by intelligence.

We all have our mental and physical defects. Life's a battle. A hopeful, optimistic mind is a wonderful help to health and happiness.

Hope stimulates the nervous system, tones up mind and body, promotes ambition, courage and determination and reduces strain and effort to a minimum.

Let's try it! Let's take a Babe Ruth at the bat attitude, make a base hit at every sick thought, a home run for health and happiness and we shall be as healthy as a flock of centipedes with one foot in the grave.

MAIN LOADING POINT NEEDED AT AIRPORT

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

With the influx of commercial air lines for points outside of Boston, the need of a central loading point for passengers is becoming evident, air company officials pointed out today.

At present, Colonial Air Transport loads passengers in front of their hangar, and New England & Western Transport, along with Eastern Air Express, use the administration building.

In this way, prospective air travelers don't know which end of the field they are supposed to go to in order to get aboard the proper ship.

In order to bring about such a central point, one man would have charge of checking all passenger tickets and reservations, believes George Barry, Boston traffic manager for New England & Western.

CHECK TICKETS

In this way, passengers riding to the airport, either by bus, taxi or automobile, could drive up to the administration building, their tickets would be checked and they would be placed aboard the proper air liner. Tickets would continue being sold in each company.

All passengers thus passing through would be checked off on a list, and the air travel industry be brought a little nearer to the standard set by the railroads.

"Flying on scheduled air lines," said Barry, "is rapidly reaching the point where it coincides with rail travel."

EASIER FOR PASSENGERS

"Passengers flying out of an airport such as Boston's would find things much easier and a more direct check could be kept on them if they went through one central point.

"Colonial is doing a good job with their passengers, but I receive many requests for information as to where each air liner loads.

"One central point would straighten the whole matter out. We will shortly have several more lines flying out of Boston, and the simplest way of all to find out who's who is to send them into the air from a specified point."

BIG BILL FOR BENEFIT

Plans for the testimonial concert for the family of the late John J. "Jack" O'Brien, well known singer and entertainer of Boston, have been completed by a committee of friends and a program of over 40 acts of varied entertainment arranged.

The concert will be held Sunday, May 25, in the Municipal building, South Boston, and the proceeds will go to the relief of the popular entertainer's family.

The sort of program arranged is believed to be unusually appropriate, for the late "Jack" O'Brien was himself always the first to offer a song and dance skit in whatever benefit appealed to him for aid in supporting some worthy cause.

Four orchestras, three quartets, soprano, tenor and baritone soloists, a saxaphone sextet, comedy acts and other forms of vaudeville are included in the big program.

Mrs. Annie Curran's Funeral Tomorrow

The funeral of Mrs. Annie Curran, wife of John Curran of 90 Lonsdale rd., a resident of East Boston for more than 40 years, will take place tomorrow. Solemn high mass will be sung in the Star of the Sea Church, East Boston, at 10 a. m. Burial will be at Holyhood Cemetery. Mrs. Curran was a member of the Sacred Heart Married Ladies Sodality and one of the most popular residents of the section. She leaves besides her husband, two sons, John J. and James H., and four daughters, Anna R., Gertrude A., Mary P. and Catherine E. Curran.

Typo Union Posts Call for Election

The call for the annual election of Boston Typographical Union No. 13, to be held Wednesday, May 28, was yesterday posted in the various chapels of the local throughout the city.

According to the announcement members of chapels will vote in their respective shops, while the polling place of all others will be at Banquet Hall, 3 Boylston pl. The polls here will be open from 12 m to 2 p. m. and 4:30 to 7 p. m.

Lowell to Appeal Tax Abatement Case

Lowell, May 16—City Solicitor Henry V. Charbonneau declared today he will appeal the decision of Judge Hammond of Superior Court in the Hamilton Mill tax abatement case, ordering the city to refund $58,783 of the 1927 taxes.

Several important questions of law arose during the hearing, the solicitor said, and he feels these should be carried to the Supreme Judicial Court for a ruling.

Airport Super to Attend Convention

Albert L. Edson, superintendent of the Boston Municipal Airport, left Boston today to attend the three-day National Airport Conference in Buffalo.

The conference, attended by prominent figures in the airport construction and maintenance circles, will solve many problems confronting the various airport managers and operators in the country.

Sponsored by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, the conference is the second of its kind.

Given Sentence for Eating Stock

Last August Charles Stoddard of 11 Julian st., Roxbury, out of a job and quite badly in need of funds for the support of his family, which included four children, ranging from 12 months to five years, took work selling bricks of ice cream.

But a plainclothes officer informed him that he would have to obtain a license. Stoddard had no money for the license. So the four Stoddard children feasted on his ice cream stock. A few days ago he was arrested, charged with the larceny of $2.80 worth of ice cream and the box from which he was to peddle the stock. Judge John Duff found him guilty and sentenced him to a month in the House of Correction. Sentence was suspended.

Drug Pedlar Gets Year's Jail Term

Joseph Ferullo, 31, of Cottage st., East Boston, described by federal officials as a "notorious drug pedlar," was sentenced to a year in Worcester jail yesterday by Judge Lowell in federal court.

Ferullo was tried April 24 on charges of selling 602 grains of morphine to undercover agents and he agreed to a directed verdict of guilty. Sentence was deferred until yesterday.

Mrs. Hobbs Is Honored at Lunch

Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Sr., Is Charming Hostess to Retiring President of G. O. P. Club

MRS. WILLIAM H. COOLIDGE, SR., of Boston and Magnolia, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, the retiring president of the Woman's Republican Club. The board of managers of the club and about 40 guests were present. Mrs. Coolidge's home is one of the most beautiful on the North Shore and her hospitality and philanthropy is well known. An organ recital was enjoyed by the guests.

IT WILL BE INDEED A welcome bit of news to hear that the rainbow fete will be held for the third time on Mrs. Coolidge's estate this summer. This is a social and charitable event which is looked forward to with anticipation by the whole North Shore, because of its beauty, originality and real good-fellowship among the many who are interested in the Boston Children's Friend Society. Mrs. Harold Cutler is the chairman this year and I can imagine Mrs. Coolidge will be happy to look on for a change, she having managed the affair for the past three seasons. The rainbow fete will take place on July 19 and many interesting and amusing surprises are being planned.

Harvard Glee Club Gives Concert

Big Turnout for Second of Concerts at Museum of Fine Arts

By MOSES SMITH

The second of the Free Concerts at the Museum of Fine Arts was given by the Harvard Glee Club, under the direction of Dr. Archibald T. Davison.

Again there was a huge turnout, although the weather must have been a strong deterrent to many. Dr. Davison arranged a program of pieces drawn from the Glee Club's regular concert repertoire, and seemed to be at no pains to make "concessions" to a popular audience. For thus maintaining his artistic standards he is to be thanked, since nothing in the concert hall is more malodorous than conscious condescension.

The program, however, was for another reason not good. There was not enough rousing, booming music, as one expects from a male chorus. Beginning with Parry's "Jerusalem" and ending with Coleridge Taylor's "Drake's Drum," there was only an occasional piece to relieve the monotony of quiet, mellifluous singing.

Perhaps the conductor wished to avoid the disturbing echoes of the Museum, which was not built primarily for concerts. He was even less successful than would have been true with a more vigorous program, for often the outlines of a quiet phrase could not be made out at all.

The chorus itself was not in best form, perhaps on account of the trickiness of the surroundings. The audience, however, enjoyed even the lesser favors and applauded so heartily that there were additions to the announced program.

Pastels Courted by Tennis Enthusiasts

THIS SLEEVELESS AFFAIR of white marocain with intricate piecings and a box-pleated skirt is from the Patou selections. (Sketched in Paris.)

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, May 16.

WHATEVER MAY be the status of your tennis game, you should see that you are served with a smart tennis ensemble that should certainly assist you to score a personal triumph if not an athletic one. This winter at various resorts along the Riviera, especially at Monte Carlo and at the famous courts at Cannes, several very distinctive tennis costumes were noted, many of them worn by expert players, thus showing that however good the player, she does not disdain the comfort of a perfect tennis frock in her search for championship honors.

The tennis frocks that will be seen this season, are simple but colorful, the dress itself being quite plain, usually of white in crepe de chine or heavy shantung, and worn with a bright sweater and a matching headband.

For all their apparent simplicity, such frocks are generally of quite complicated cut with intricate piecings and other "dressmaker" touches. Without of course loosing sight of the practical appeal of the frock. Skirts are generally of a sensible length with ample ease assured through the medium of box-pleats.

We thought that it might interest you to see a fashionable couturier's interpretation of the tennis frock, and so we had the very nice looking little costume sketched for you at the ateliers of Patou whose sports collection this season is particularly good. The frock shown here is a sleeveless affair of white marocain with intricate piecings and a box pleated skirt. With it is worn an angora sweater, also sleeveless, of a bright shade of orange. The sun-visor is of stiffly starched white pique and is bound around the head with a scarf of orange crepe.

The other sketch is of a caped frock of black alpaca made by Premet and worn by the Marquise de Montagliano. The collars and cuffs are of white pique. A finely pleated ruffle edges the circular flounce which is placed rather low on the snugly fitting skirt.

The cape, slashed at the sides, is removable. The marquise wears a black beret with a jewelled clasp with this ideal little daytime frock.

CAPED FROCK OF black alpaca by Premet and worn by Marquise de Montagliano. White pique is used in the collars and cuffs. (Sketched in Paris.)

Listen . . . last night we met a John what looked like the real money . . . swell clothes, tux suit n' everything. He cum up in a swell car too! You know, all shiny and big polish in front. It looked like he had just left the chauffure off somewhere, says he, 'You're just my kind Kid!' And dance . . . Say, that guy was some swell speeder! He'd make yuh think yuh was just walkin on air . . . Then afterward he took me out . . . such a swell feed we had too! I couldn't eat no breakfast this morning. . . . Said he was a big engineer or something . . . You know? They make out plans for them buildings . . . structural steel designer . . . that's what I think he said he was. I was all fixed for a couple of dates ahead too. But what do yuh think . . . ? He was just leavin me at the door . . . an I was awful ashamed too . . . what a dump of a neighborhood we live in! A couple of Dicks grab him, car an all! 'We want yer,' says one of the big guys . . . an he showed his badge. I didn't make no scene or anything like that. I was so scared. Says he to me, 'By, by Kid! I won't be gone long . . . these guys is all 'wet.' Say, Lill, wasn't that a experience? Yuh can never tell, can yuh?"

NERVY THUMBERS

We have been doing some weekending lately on the Capes. At times we take the Provincetown trip. Now and then we make the run to Rockport on Cape Ann. In this manner we vary the views and incidentally the experiences. On the home trips Monday mornings, when we are alone (this editorial "We" meaning one) an empty seat incites the thumb-jerkers to hail us. As a rule these wobblies of the asphalt are a hard-boiled clan. . . . We don't like to take chances, but now and then our heart softens and we pick one up. On the long stretches a bit of conversation livens up the homeward journey.

We have picked up all kinds—workmen going to new jobs, respectable commuters who had missed their trains, and once a yeggman who had broken jail. This latter experience was not so exciting. The chap looked inoffensive enough. He bid us a pleasant good-bye at Quincy after borrowing a cigarette. A headline in the evening papers informed us that he had been recaptured shortly after stepping out of our car. The real wobblies of the road are more troublesome. Their technique? Well, you all know it: "Going down, Jack?"—this with an upjack of the arm and thumb. We are not named Jack, but that doesn't seem to make any difference. They are a chummy lot.

On our last trip back we picked up a busted Better Brush salesman (at least, so he told us he was).

"Where are you going, we asked.

"Boston," said the stranded traveler.

On the first mile he informed us that he had wobbled from Indiana. But the brushes didn't go so well now. He was broke and looking for a new job. Did we think that he would find one in Boston?

"There must be plenty of good jobs in Boston."

He had stayed there for about a week once . . . but the brushes went better in the country. His home was in Indiana, but he had always longed to see the wuzzy the ocean. He just couldn't ever go back to Indiana.

"Yes," he said, "I can't go back. I know that I'll find the right kind of a job here in the East if I look long enough for it."

In this wistful fashion he went on for several miles. The pathos was touching. We slowed up at Massachusetts ave. to let him off.

"Say," he said as he clicked the door—"could you let me have two bits?"

On other occasions when we have picked up a passenger we didn't like the looks of we have worked out a technique of polite disposal. We start up the conversation in this manner.

"Well, my good man, what do you think of the World Court?" Or, "Do you think the business depression will continue?"

These questions might be varied by asking your new acquaintance—"How is the Eddington atom theory going now?" Possibly, "What do you think of the Pulitzer prize awards."

We once browbeat an unwelcome companion by asking him if the green country thereabouts was conducive to high thinking. Such questions invariably cause the passenger to do some uneasy wriggling in his seat. He will answer—"Uh! What's that?"

Maybe only a gurgle. Then a few minutes later after musing over the possible sanity of his host—

"Say, Boss, let me off here, will yer? There's a buddy I wanter to see in this town."

MORE SAILINGS FROM BOSTON

A plan is under consideration for sending the Europa or the Bremen, world's fastest ocean liners, to Boston on an exhibition trip, Mayor Curley was informed today by Christopher de Groot, general agent of the North German Lloyd Line for New England.

Increased sailings of vessels of the line from this port are also being planned, De Groot revealed. Stating that he had been in touch with officials of the line at Bremen with regard to Boston, he wrote, in part:

"Officials of our company are heartily in accord with your program.

"In addition to this practical co-operation, my principals feel they would like to be among those who financially support your commercial, industrial and publicity bureau. They have, therefore, instructed me to forward you the enclosed check for $100, a small contribution to this fund, at the same time asking me to express to you their sincere wishes for the success of the bureau."

Turtle Dated 1769 Deserts His Pond for Breath of Air

Haverhill, May 16—An ancient turtle came out of the mud yesterday and paraded along the highway in South Groveland.

The date 1769 was carved on the turtle's back when Patrolman William T. Shannahan found the wanderer and took it in charge.

After many school children and grownups had viewed the turtle, Patrolman Shannahan placed it back in Groveland Mill pond, from where it is believed to have come.

Poor Form Drives Austin From Courts

London, May 16 (INS)—H. W. "Bunny" Austin has run away from London to a remote village where he is unlikely to see a lawn tennis ball in flight, and where he hopes to regain his form. After playing for England against Germany in the first round of the Davis Cup, Austin, it was stated, was dropped at his own request from the team picked to represent England against Poland. His baggage will not contain a single racquet. By thus escaping from the game for a time he hopes to be able to play through the summer at his best.

Taunton Train L[illegible] by Engine Trouble

Disabled by a broken eccentric rod on the locomotive, the New Bedford to Boston train due at 8:30 a. m. was delayed a half-hour today below the Taunton station.

The coaches were attached to a train from Fall River for the trip to Boston. From Taunton to Boston the dual train made the stops for both schedules, arriving at South Station at 9:20.

Here's a Favorite Cake

Devil's Food Cake is one of the most popular recipes of recent years. This is how it looked when made in the Martha Lee Cooking School.

A favorite cake, particularly with the men folks, is the Devil's Food Cake, which we recently made in the Martha Lee Cooking School and which is illustrated on this page today. This is a deliciously moist and tender cake and the quantities given will make three large layers.

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE

2-3 cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
½ cup hot water
2 tsps. baking powder
2-3 cup cocoa
1 cup thick sour milk
½ tsp. soda
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt

Blend shortening, sugar and eggs thoroughly in one operation. Beat cocoa in hot water until smooth and add to first mixture. Then add milk beaten with soda and flavoring and lastly stir in flour, salt and baking powder which have been sifted together. Bake in 8-inch layer cake pans in moderate oven (375 F.) for about 25 minutes. This makes three layers which may be iced with the following icing:

Cook 1½ cups granulated sugar and ⅓ tsp. salt with ½ cup water to a temperature of 238 F., or until a syrup forms a soft ball in cold water. Pour slowly over 2 egg whites beaten stiff, beating mixture as you do so. While icing is still hot, fold in 12 marshmallows which have been cut in pieces. Beat until of a consistency to spread.

FEATURE DESSERTS AND HAM DISHES

Summer desserts and Scotch ham specialties were featured in the lessons given in the Martha Lee Cooking School this week.

The ham, which was a favorite brand in a new Scotch cure, was voted truly delicious and adapted to a variety of cookery methods. Especially popular was the Creole Ham with Noodles, prepared from this Scotch ham (and while I can't give you the brand name here, I can send it to you promptly if you will drop me a line).

First, the Scotch ham was seared quickly on both sides, then cooked slowly until tender. To the fat in the pan was added 4 tbsps. of tomato sauce (we used ketchup with good results), ½ cup grated cheese, ½ cup of bread crumbs and a package of broad egg noodles. This was stirred together and the noodles were arranged on a platter around the ham.

BAKED IN MILK

This Scotch ham, baked in milk, was tender and delicious, too. Everyone in both classes sampled it. Breaded Ham Cutlets are new and delicious, as is baked ham slices with brown sugar or soft maple sugar and mustard. This lesson sheet also includes Ham with Scalloped Potatoes and Ham Delight, a mouth-watering combination of a thick slice of Scotch ham with marshmallows, sliced pineapple and pineapple juice.

The summer desserts covered Pineapple Rice, Porcupine Pears, Mock Biscuit Tortoni, Cream Orient, Cocoanut Custard and Pineapple Pudding. We have prepared extra copies of this lesson sheet for any of our club members who will drop me a line, giving their membership number.

CREAM ORIENT

1 pkg. lemon gelatine
1 c. boiling water
1 c. canned pineapple juice
1 c. whipped cream
¾ c. pineapple
½ c. preserved ginger

Dissolve gelatine in boiling water. Add pineapple juice. Chill till thick but not set. Whip until frothy. Fold in whipped cream, diced pineapple and preserved ginger (chopped fine). Mold and chill. Serves 10.

STOP CONSTIPATION AT THE START

You May Pay If You Don't

When you realize that about 90% of all sickness begins with constipation, you won't want to take chances. If you have the symptoms — bad breath, coated tongue, always tired—put a stop to them now!

But do it the natural way. Not with pills and drugs, which give but temporary relief and must be taken in increasing doses. Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—an appetizing deliciously flavored cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN sweeps the system clean of wastes and impurities. Its action is natural; the roughage carries with it the poisons which clog your system.

In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in iron. Scientific research shows that nearly all this iron goes into the blood, making it give the rich glow of healthy color.

You'll like ALL-BRAN. Ready-to-eat with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Physicians recommend it. And we guarantee it to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. Two tablespoonfuls daily — with every meal, in recurring cases.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers in the red-and-green package. Served in hotels, restaurants and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

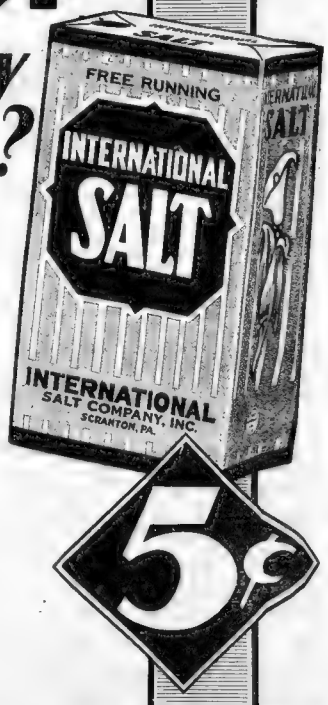
WHY NOT Save Money on Salt, too?



If you are one of those housewives, who realize that pennies saved daily amount to a big saving at the end of the year, then you will be interested in knowing that it is possible to buy salt in a new, economical way.

Ask your grocer for International Salt. For 5c you will receive a big, handy package containing almost as much free-running salt as you have been paying 10c for in other free-running salts.

And it is the world's best table salt. Even-grained, crystalline, absolutely pure. And of course, always free-running.

ASPARAGUS HOLDS CENTER OF MARKET THIS WEEK

SUPPLY IS PLENTIFUL AND PRICES ARE REASONABLE

Asparagus holds the center of the stage this week, and occupies a large part of the sidewalks as well, in the wholesale market section. The quality varies and so do prices. Straight, plump green stalks with compact tips and fresh looking ends are the things to look for when selecting your grass. Small bunches of native asparagus are from 15c to 18c, large bunches of Southern from 20c to 25c and extra fancy as high as 30c a large bunch.

Native rhubarb is more and more plentiful and the price continues to drop. Don't forget Rhubarb Slump, Rhubarb and Pineapple Conserve, and Rhubarb Pie, of course. It's a wonderful spring tonic, and mighty easy to take in these forms. Green peas and beans are plentiful and so is spinach, and the price of old potatoes has dropped slightly. Lettuce is still high at 12½ to 15c a head, with Iceberg at 15c to 25c.

When lemonade weather arrived promptly the lemon prices soared—almost doubling themselves in a week. California Valencia oranges are taking their place on the fruit counters alongside the diminishing supplies of Navels and a few Floridas. Strawberries are plentiful, the Louisiana berries coming in the pint boxes.

There's no noticeable price change at the meat counters this week. The poultry dealers tell me they have a limited amount of native fresh killed roasting chicken weighing about 3 lbs. and retailing for 50c to 60c a pound.

Small chicken lobsters are advertised for as low as three for $1, and 50c a pound is the common price on fresh mackerel, today. Appa-

Macaroni Salad Is a Delicious Dish

½ pkg. elbow macaroni
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 cup chopped celery
¼ cup diced pimiento
½ cup chopped sweet pickles
½ cup tomatoes, cut in pieces
1 cup Thousand Island Dressing
1 head lettuce

Boil the elbow macaroni for nine minutes in 2 qts. rapidly boiling water, to which ½ tbsp. salt has been added. Drain and chill. Cut in small pieces and season with salt and pepper. Add the celery, pimiento, pickle and tomatoes. Mix with Thousand Island Dressing, tossing together lightly with a fork. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves. Capers make a good addition to this salad and 1 tbsp. may be omitted if desired. This is also an excellent way to use macaroni left over from the day before.

HOW GOOD TEA IS BREWED

"Tea," the average business man is wont to say, "is something for the afternoon gossipfest of the women folks, but for us nothing can take the place of really masculine coffee."

But honestly, isn't it a fact that the women-folks themselves are responsible for this preference? For don't we all too often fail to provide our menfolks with really good tea?

According to Mr. J. Graham Wright, president of Joseph Tetley & Co., there is really something in this thought. Mr. Wright is at the head of the American company of this old firm of tea packers and distributors and has been for a quarter of a century. Undoubtedly then, he has been in a position to observe and from these observations to draw reasonable conclusions.

USE EARTHENWARE POT

In Mr. Wright's opinion tea may be brewed into a sickly, insipid concoction which naturally has no appeal for the masculine palate and he fears this is largely how it is done in America.

"No wonder," says Mr. Wright, "that our men-folk as a body have consistently refused to become tea drinkers. There is a psychology about the thing as well as actual appetite. A thin, amber-colored fluid which barely tints the tea cup is not appealing to a man no matter how delightful the aroma. He has been accustomed to the rich coloring of coffee and in his judgment the appearance of tea suffers by comparison.

"But weak tea is really not tea at all. Properly made, tea is a deep mahogany color and is a stimulating and refreshing beverage. And, it is substantial, too. Admiral Peary in his trip to the North Pole found it a wonderful beverage for both himself and the men of his party. On the other hand, travelers through the parched deserts of Arabia find it equally refreshing."

Mr. Wright declares that tea should be brewed in an earthenware pot and that the hot water should be allowed to remain on the leaves for exactly 5 minutes. Further, he finds that the average housewife ordinarily uses just about half as much of the tea leaves as is necessary to make a good brew.

NO LEMON IN HOT TEA

The manner of serving tea is also quite important, according to Mr. Wright.

"Use good rich cream," he says. "The habit of using lemon in hot tea is responsible for much of its non-acceptance. Lemon is fine for the iced drink but there is all the difference in the world when it comes to a cup of hot tea. The cream makes it—gives it body and furnishes just that substantial element that the menfolk demand. Our English cousins consume vastly more tea than we do and I believe it is because they make it a decidedly attractive, invigorating, sustaining beverage."

There has already been a noticeable increase in the consumption of the finer grades of teas in this country, according to Mr. Wright. Women's tastes have become more discriminating and the better blends have found a wider market.

FINDS OVEN BIG ASSET

When I'm counting up my culinary equipment blessings, I never forget to give special praise to the wonderful little oven, and its big brother, which I use as an auxiliary to my gas oven. At this time of year it's most convenient, and at the summer cottage when you're dependent on a kerosene stove or one-or-two-burner electric grill, it's just indispensable.

The small oven is extremely efficient, however. It consists of a protecting plate that stands over the gas or other fuel, a wire rack, an aluminum hood and a set of aluminum pans, 2 pudding pans and a muffin pan that I wouldn't part with for the world. One of the nice things about this outfit is that every edge is beaded so that you cannot possibly cut your hands in using or in cleaning the oven. Every part fits tightly, too. The toasting rack makes most brown toast in jig time, and potatoes will bake on it quickly and economically (about 20 minutes). Cake can be baked in the pudding pan and split into two layers or iced in a loaf, and a more shallow pan is excellent for baking apples, holding custard cups and roasting the small cut of meat. In roasting meats in this oven, there is no shrinking and the meat cooks tender and juicy in 15 minutes to the pound after 10 minutes of searing.

Cooking by Pattern Popular These Days

Did you know that, just as you use a foundation pattern in your dressmaking, there are foundation patterns in cookery? The latest model culinary food pattern is fashioned after the most up-to-date and practical fact on nutrition. It is supposed to serve as a basis of the meal for each day. As in sewing, dresses made from the same foundation pattern may vary greatly in the finished product, and meals based on the same pattern need not be colorless and monotonous. The clever cook can build either a simple or a fancy meal from this original pattern.

DAILY CULINARY PATTERN
4 cups milk (children)
2 cups milk (adult)
2 vegetables besides potato (one raw vegetable)
2 fruits (one raw)
1 serving of meat, fish or eggs
2 servings of whole grained product

Macaroni With Peanut Butter

½ pkg. elbow macaroni
1 c. peanut butter
1 tbsp. minced parsley
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ c. bread crumbs
1½ tbsps. flour
1½ c. milk
Tomato sauce

Parboil the elbow macaroni for nine minutes in two qts. rapidly boiling water, to which ½ tbsp. salt has been added. Drain. Stir the peanut butter into the macaroni, a tsp. at a time; cover and set in a warm place until the peanut butter melts and blends in. Add the salt, paprika and parsley, then mix in the crumbs. Add flour to the milk first, then pour into the macaroni mixture and blend thoroughly. Pour into a well greased baking dish, cover top with crumbs and dot with the peanut butter. Bake until brown or about 20 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Child's Diet Should Have Plenty of Good Milk

You may be tired of hearing me preach on milk, but one thing is certain—nothing has yet been found to take the place of milk as a good, wholesome all round drink for young and old.

Plenty of milk in your child's diet will insure the right foundation for robust, vigorous good health throughout life. This state is very strict in regard to laws governing milk and cream, and all milk sold must be inspected by Massachusetts State Inspectors. You can let the children drink all they want and store up energy from this wonderful food. Have you tried putting a little vanilla or maple flavoring in milk as a variation in the taste, or to tempt Junior on the "choosey" days?

A delicious milk shake is made by adding two tablespoons of chocolate syrup to one cup of milk and beating with an egg beater.

Eggnog is a wonderful food drink, and when Mary and Johnny come running in from play, tired and exhausted and demanding "something good" the rest and cooling food drink will do wonders. For each drink, use one egg, ¼ cup of milk, ½ tablespoon sugar and a speck of salt.

2 MORE STATES ADDED TO LIST FOR REPEAL

New York, May 16 Two more states give an outright majority for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in the semifinal returns of The Literary Digest nation-wide poll on prohibition, according to the returns tabulated in tomorrow's issue of the magazine

Louisiana and Nevada join Connecticut, New Jersey and Rhode Island with more than a 50 per cent sentiment for repeal, plus a substantial vote for modification

No states other than the five previously reported, Arkansas, Kansas, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Tennessee, register a majority vote for strict enforcement

Nevada, with a 57 per cent vote to annul the prohibition law, has ascendency as the wettest state in the Union in this straw referendum. Kansas, with nearly 4 per cent of its ballots registered for enforcement, continues to lead in the dry column.

Flooded Streets in Passion Play Town

Oberammergau, Germany, May 16 (INS)—Visitors arriving here today to witness the famous Passion Play were compelled to resort to old world means of transportation to travel about this almost medieval village.

Floods occurring in upper Bavaria, due to recent heavy rains, have inundated the Oberammergau railway station to such depth that all visitors and their baggage had to be transported to hotels in high, two-wheeled carts.

Bunker Hill Figures in Mystery Again

Yesterday's Tercentenary Radio Mystery Message was the second of this series born on famous Bunker Hill.

George Bunker, an English Puritan, settled in Charlestown in 1633 and became a notable of that town. Little did he dream that the beautiful green hill of his property would carry his name down through the ages, or his soil receive a baptism of the blood of the first patriot

Gen. Joseph Warren, whose head was pierced by a British musket ball on that memorial morning of June 17th, 1775.

Joseph Warren was scarcely launched upon life's adventure, being but still in his early thirties when the Colonists decided to throw off the yoke of England Warren threw himself into the cause of the Revolutionists, and his intelligence and natural ability as a leader soon brought to him the rank of major general. Only two months before his death he was elected president of the Provincial Congress, which met at Watertown. Although possessing the rank of general, Warren cast his lot with that handful of men on Bunker's Hill as a private

Were you one of those able to fill in the missing words?

The Mystery Messenger claims that everyone will get that one right and also the fifth message, which he will broadcast over Stations WHDH and WAAC today. Be sure and listen in. Be alert to solve the picture cue in today's Boston Evening American

Remember, besides the mystery, there's money in the air

BID FOR PLACES IN OCEAN PLANE

Universal Service Special Cable

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

Friedrichafen, May 15—As the Graf Zeppelin, with all cabins booked, is today being groomed for its first Europe-to-South America flight, cabled bids are arriving from those wishing to be first or among the first passengers for the coming transatlantic flight of the gigantic Dornier DO-X.

William S. Weber and Nate Wexler, owners of the Palace Hotel, New York, are reported to have offered $10,000 each for the passage, and at the same time two women, rivals for the distinction of being the first woman passenger of this huge 12-motored, 7,200 H P seaplane, have cabled similar offers from America.

One of these women cabled that she was willing "to pay any price" if she is given the distinction of being the only woman on the DO-X.

Seized Liquor Is Problem to Hultman

Anne Breaks With Eaton to Wed Ted

Bright-haired, vital, alive, young Anne Murdock had been three years at the Eaton Advertising Agency when her opportunity came—the opportunity to become Eaton's personal secretary. To work with a man of Laurence Eaton's breadth and power was something to dream of, for Anne had ambitions beyond a suburban home with Ted O'Hara, who was on her own rung of the ladder. The only beauty Anne Murdock saw in her own home was that of her sister, Kathleen, who had lately deserted that home for a career in the chorus. But Eaton overlooks a commandment between the secretary and young O'Hara which leaves him wondering whether he may not have to surrender his efficient assistant to Cupid. Anne senses this and declares that she has no dreams whatever of matrimony. Eaton sends Anne on a business trip to Chicago. On her return Linda brings matters in the Eaton household to a head by asking for a divorce. Anne is connected with Linda's trip to Reno. Later she leaves Eaton's employ.

CHAPTER XXX

Anne opened the door and fell back at sight of Eaton, the estranged eyes, the set mouth the outthrust jaw.

"I asked you not to come—you shouldn't have—" she began, but he pushed past her into the living room and turned on her.

"I had to come. Look here," he began, half incoherent. "I've heard—Anne, you can't leave me; you've got to stay."

"But after what we agreed?" she said, almost dizzy with his nearness.

"It doesn't matter what people say or think. You were willing to leave for my sake. Well, don't worry about that any more. I was willing to let you go for your own sake. I've got over it. You must stay." Then abruptly, he took her into his arms, roughly, completely. "I've got to have you," he told her hoarsely. "I'm mad about you. You know it, Anne. You know you belong to me!"

He forced her chin up with his hands and bent to her mouth and kissed her hungrily. They were alone in the apartment. Night encompassed them, pressing in at the windows. They stood isolated in a small circle of light, lost and ostracized in that desperate hour of need and support. So while she cried out, repudiating him for both their sakes, she yet clung to him with a remnant of strength. It was pain, it was agony, it was peril and madness, it was a dream come true, and it was rapture to be held like that.

Eaton said huskily: "You do care for me. You do!"

That brought her to her senses. She did care for him. Too much if she surrendered to the demands of her own flesh and blood and his, they were lost.

She did not answer. Slowly Eaton withdrew his arms and faced her, his gray eyes dark in his white face.

"So it's true, then."

"What is true?" she managed to ask.

"That you're to marry O'Hara—that man Adams told me so at the newspaper office. I didn't believe it. I couldn't. I believe wholly."

For an instant she wondered if she were going mad. Adams? She put her hand to her eyes in a gesture of blindness. Jimmy must have told Adams that she was engaged, as he had suggested. And Eaton had jumped at conclusions.

Well, it was a way out. She'd tell him it was so, and then he'd leave her and she need never see him again—never see him again

"Is it true?" Eaton demanded again.

"Yes," said Anne, in a small tired voice, "it's quite true."

After a long moment he said:

"Well, my mistake. I thought—it doesn't matter what I thought I won't ask you to forgive me for what I did just now. I'm not sorry," he said, and turned and walked to the door.

A moment later it shut behind him. Anne ran to it, her arms outstretched. "Only come back," she pleaded with the empty hall—"only come back. I'll do anything, be anything you want me to be—only come back!"

But nothing answered her save the echoes of her own desperate weeping.

Eaton hailed a taxicab and climbed into it wearily. He felt bruised, like a man who has taken terrific punishment. He'd gone there to tell her he didn't believe Adams' casual, world-shaking statement, to tell her he loved her, to ask her to wait until he was free, to ask her to give herself into his keeping, forever—and he'd not said a word of all this because his need was so great he'd taken her in his arms and kissed her and lost himself in her imagined response. Now he was glad he had not spoken, for she was to marry O'Hara.

Later that night Eaton went out, hunted up some men and proceed-

MUCH TAKEN WITHOUT WARRANT

Asks U. S. to Remove Rum From Headquarters; Approves Battering Doors

Police Commissioner Eugene C Hultman admitted today he is struggling with a liquor problem.

The problem concerns the disposition of liquor seized by the former liquor squad, which is now undeh lock and key at headquarters.

Commissioner Hultman said he had written the federal authorities suggesting they remove the liquor if they fail to take it, he said he will seek some legal and proper method of destroying it

A quantity of it, he pointed out, is liquor seized without warrants and it would be necessary to have full authority before disposing of it

Asking if contraband beverages seized by the various divisions would be stored at headquarters in the future, the commissioner replied in the negative.

APPROVES RAMMING DOORS

"I have suggested the State take it over as soon as seized," he said, "and produce the required amounts in court when the cases go to trial if this suggestion is not adopted I plan to have it stored in a bonded warehouse. I do not believe in keeping it in headquarters. It is dangerous"

Asked if he approved of battering in doors on liquor raids, Commissioner Hultman replied

"Anything to get evidence on them. One reason I made that recent trip around town with Bup Crowley was to see how hard it was to get into speakeasies. I am satisfied it is quite a job to get into some places."

He said he was asked in a new general order for a further check on vice and liquor resorts on each division, and admitted he is interested in padlock proceedings.

"Some of this property," he pointed out, "is owned by very respectable people."

Referring to proposed new station houses, the commissioner said he would recommend the use of city-owned property as much as possible.

"For example," he said, "the city owns property on Cambridge st. If Superintendent Crowley reports that such a location would be satisfactory, I will recommend it for the new station in that section."

SCREEN FOR DETECTIVES

Commissioner Hultman said he believes in physical training and recreation for police officers, and that physical condition will count in promotions.

He introduced an innovation in the form of a screen to be erected temporarily in front of the platform in the bureau of criminal investigation to protect inspectors from the view of prisoners during lineups.

Supt. Crowley remarked that criminals had little difficulty in learning the identity and appearance of detectives, but the commissioner said he would try anything once

Somerville Man Is Hurt by Automobile

Charles A. Richards, 58, of 68 Berkeley st., Somerville, was knocked down today by an automobile which, the police say, was operated by Michael F. RAIDERS SMASH DOWN DOORS

Following up his ultimatum to speakeasy proprietors in his district, Capt. Herbert Goodwin of the LaGrange st. stations last night led his second drive in two days against six suspect rum dives, finding no liquor but making sure that the places stopped operating.

The raids, a continuation of the city-wide drive on vice and liquor ordered by Commr. Hultman, resulted in the seizure of six doors, the officers, armed with warrants and sledge hammers, battered in the heavily-barricaded entrances of the suspected premises.

Capt. Goodwin admitted the bootleggers, warned of the impending raids, had erected powerful defenses and had done away with all traces of liquor. In places, police were unable to gain an entrance until the bootleggers admitted them.

The raiding officers returned to headquarters with six doors, and with threats that they would continue their liquor drive until every speakeasy in the city had been "hammered out of business."

The raided places were on Hudson, Carver, Tremont and Common sts., and on Shawmut ave.

AUTOS LOOTED OF DRESSES

One hundred and twenty women's dresses, valued at $1225, were stolen from three parked automobiles in Salem, while the salesmen who were driving the cars were in stores securing orders

Larceny of the dresses from cars was reported to City Marshal Daniel Foster. Six other salesmen from Boston have been victimized of their goods on Salem streets recently. Authorities are convinced the thefts are being committed by a gang of thieves from Boston who trail the salesmen out of their Boston offices to Salem

Rupert K. Gange, of 208 Marlboro st. Wollaston, parked his sedan in front of a clothing store in Crombie st. Salem. When he came out of a store, where he was working up an order for dresses, he found that the handle of the door was knocked off and the car broken into. Forty costly dresses, valued at $800 were stolen.

Alexander Bleeker, of 61 Babcock st. another salesman lost 40 more dresses. His machine was parked in Derby sq. and, like Gange's machine, the doors were jacked but the handles were broken off by the thieves.

Harry Shults of 15 Kneeland st. Boston, lost 40 dresses stolen.

SCORES REVERE LIGHT RATES

Gas and electric light rates in Revere "are exorbitant and the charges wholesale extortion," declared Rep. Thomas F. Carroll of Revere in an appeal to the department of public utilities yesterday for an official investigation of rates charged by the Suburban Gas & Electric Co

"My constituency has full faith, as I have, in the department's fairness," he said. "But we beseech you to check this arrogant corporate octopus which, as a public utility, should be compelled to adjust itself to the situation which confronts it and give the public a fair return for its hard-earned dollars.

"I trust that our citizens may, in the near future, be relieved of some of the unjust burden that they have been forced to pay at the expense of having their gas or electricity completely shut off," he concluded.

FIGHT BUS LINE IN MEDFORD

Several hundred persons are expected at a mass meeting in the aldermanic chamber of the Medford City Building tonight to protest the removal of trolley service between Medford and West Medford and to oppose the substitution of bus service. President Michael S. O'Brien of the Board of Aldermen will preside

The Eastern plans to remove trolley service and the city plans reconstruction of High st. due to the width of the street, so that the cars would be permanently routed.

The Elevated will operate but service on the same roadway as the present trolley service and would cut the running time between Medford sq and Sullivan sq by about 20 minutes by routing the buses over Mystic ave and operating them express between these two points with the exception of one stop in Somerville

The Elevated claims its rails are worn out that to further repair cars on them is useless, and that it has no funds with which to install new tracks.

Opponents to the plan claim that the new service would force between Medford and Arlington and to remove the cars will do away service

MAHONEY TAKES ATHLETIC POST

Accepting the position of director and supervisor of the Somerville Recreation Commission, Francis J. Mahoney has tendered his resignation to the Somerville school board as teacher of history at the Somerville High School. The new job pays $4400 a year

Mahoney has been a member of the high school faculty since 1924. He was formerly vice-principal of the Eastern Junior High School For several years he has supervised playground activities for the Somerville Recreation Commission.

Leo Donahue, a cadet at the high school, is acting as temporary teacher of history until the school board fills the vacancy caused by Mahoney's resignation

COURT SAVES HIS WATER

Livingston Stebbins of Maitland st., Back Bay, can sympathize with the Public Works Commission for not being able to collect a water bill allegedly contracted by the previous owner of his property, but when that department threatened to shut off his own water unless he settled the other man's debt, then Stebbins went to court

Judge Cox heard Stebbins' story in equity motion session of Superior Court yesterday, and issued a temporary injunction restraining Commr. Joseph A. Rourke from shutting off the water to Stebbins residence

The bill for $11 Stebbins declined to pay, but did pay, he said, all bills contracted by himself with the water department

LEAGUE ASKS SOLONS FOR LAW TO NIP PRACTICE

Trust Uses "Investment" Instead of "Reproduction" Basis; Evils in System Cited

Recommendations for the establishment of public utility rates on the "investment" and not "replacement" theory of property valuation, and for legislation banning inflated capitalization by public utilities, are contained in a letter sent today by the Public Franchise League to every member of the Massachusetts General Court

"Regulation of rates cannot be made effective because the companies refuse any longer to agree that their rates shall be fixed on the basis of the money invested in the plants by their stockholders," the letter declares.

MEANS LITIGATION

"Because of the claims of the companies to rates fixed on 'reproduction' values and various other claims which have never been approved by the Legislature, the companies are charging rates far beyond what should be collected, and will engage in litigation every time the Department of Public Utilities reduces the rates to the level where they belong

"Under these circumstances the cities and towns should be freed from the obligation of having existing plants at high prices if they desire to undertake the service themselves in order to get better rates.

"The purchase of the local companies by the holding companies has, within the last three years alone resulted in the increase of the capitalization outstanding against 50 of these companies of more than $100,000,000.

EVILS ARE LISTED

"Excessive rates, management, engineering and other charges are being used in the attempt to take away the local companies, serving the towns and cities of the state, earnings to pay interest and dividends on the greatly increased capitalization, which is nothing but 'water.'

"The General Court has always refused to permit inflation of capitalization by public utility companies and legislation must be passed at this session if the further exploitation of the light and power industry in Massachusetts is to be stopped."

CHELSEA MAYOR HALTS GARBAGE CONTRACT AWARD TO ACCUSER

LOW BIDDER SAID TO LACK EXPERIENCE

Carleton Was One of Group That Stopped Mayor's Ash Collection Contract

Approval of the award by the Chelsea board of health of a garbage collection contract to Thomas I. Carelton of that city was refused today by Mayor John J. Whalen in a communication to the health commissioners.

Carleton was one of the 10 taxpayers whose petition before the Supreme Court to enjoin Whalen from awarding an ash collection contract resulted in charges of grave nature being made against the mayor by special master James J. Ronan of Salem, before whom the petition was heard.

Carleton is absolutely and unqualifiedly unfamiliar with the work in connection with the contract. Who en declared in his letter to the board of health. Carleton's bid of $13,900 was the lowest for the contract.

HELD FOR TRIAL AS SWINDLER

Trial of George P. Haskell alias George P. Harrison, of Worcester, on charges of stealing $2000 from Anna Turnburg of Parsons st., Brighton, by means of false pretenses was set for May 21 by Judge Duff in Boston municipal court today.

Haskell is awaiting trial in Brookline court on a similar complaint of multering $2000 from Mrs. Annie Page. He was held in bonds of $6000 in the Brookline court and the same amount was agreed upon in the Boston court.

Inspector John Mitchell of the attorney-general's office, arrested Haskell following complaints made against him by Mrs. Paige and Miss Turnburg.

Library's 'Treasure Room' Is Opened

Among the rare manuscripts in the new "Treasure Room" at Boston Public Library is this 15th century manuscript, "St. Augustine's City of God." Miss Sally Sennick of Beacon st. is gazing with admiration at this priceless art. Medieval manuscripts, and old English and American editions are on exhibition.

Edith Benjamin of Danube st., Dorchester, one of the first visitors at the newly opened "Treasure Room," was this first folio of Shakespeare, and nobody could take it away from her until she had feasted her mind on its rare beauty. New steel safes and wall cases in the "Treasure Room" hold 6000 of the library's choicest possessions, including original editions of Spenser, Marlowe, Milton, and a host of others. (Staff photos.)

Scott Police Medal Award Due Soon

The Scott medal for police bravery, which is yet to be awarded for 1929, will soon be presented, Commissioner Hultman announced yesterday he had appointed a board of merit to determine the best piece of police work during last year.

RARE EXHIBITS AT LIBRARY

Medieval manuscripts, Shakespearean folios, and rare English and American editions are exhibited at the Public Library, where formal exercises marked the opening of the new "Treasure Room," last night.

Prior to the exhibit the Society of Printers held their annual meeting and ladies' night at the University Club, being invited to visit the new Treasure Room by Charles F. D. Belden, director of the Public Library.

Autographed letters by Poe, Browning and Dickens were shown with first folio and quarios of Shakespeare, together with rare and original editions of Spenser, Marlowe, and Milton.

A Dutch manuscript on vellum, written in Gothic letters in 1466, attracted much attention with its richly illuminated borders and miniatures.

In the American collection featured exhibits were original drafts of the Freeman's Oath, the 'Bay Psalm Book' and "Eliot's Indian Bible."

Officers elected by the Society of Printers were: President Thacher Nelson, vice-president, George Parker Winship, secretary Maurice Blackmun; treasurer, David T. Pottinger; auditor, Amos Weston, and on the council, John C. Hurd, D. B. Updike, A. F. Mackay, Herbert Farrier and W. H. Greeley.

Hultman to Install New Grilling System

Boston will soon follow the lead of other large cities by installing a heavy copper screen and floodlights under which an arrested man must stand while he is being questioned by detectives from the surrounding darkness, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman said.

Under the present system the prisoners under grilling have an opportunity to see their questioners. The new police head believes that when the new screen and floodlights are installed, and detectives have the chance to see their prisoner without being seen themselves, it will result in greater efficiency.

Self-Inflicted Shot May Kill Holtsman

The condition of Raymond Holtsman, 32, of Passaic, N. J., who shot himself in the chest after threatening the life of Miss Velma Redell at 27 Union st., Medford, was worse today at Lawrence Memorial Hospital. His name is on the danger list.

SULLIVAN TO BE READY IN JUNE

Showing Improvement at Danvers; Ready to Tell Story About Garrett

Following a conversation with the hospital authorities at the Danvers State Hospital, where John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Ritz Hotel and star Garrett witness is confined, Dist.-Atty. Foley announced will take no immediate steps to serve a summons on Sullivan, but expects to have him appear before the June term of the grand jury.

He telephoned to Supt. Clarence Bonner at the Danvers hospital to ascertain whether Sullivan had improved sufficiently to be served with a summons without his health being affected.

SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

"Dr. Bonner said, according to Mr. Foley: "Sullivan is responding in some degree to the treatment. He shows an improvement. When he will be ready to come to court is a question I can't answer at this time. In this type of case he might change overnight. The man is depressed and blue."

It is no secret that Foley feels that the bulk of his case against Garrett rests with Sullivan. He wants the former Ritz Hotel owner to come in before the grand jury and tell them the same story that he told at the Garrett hearings in the State House.

TO VISIT HOSPITAL

Sullivan was the only witness who gave direct evidence before Atty.-Gen. Warner that he paid Garrett money. He is therefore a highly important witness and one absolutely necessary for the successful prosecution of the corruption case against the former liquor raider, in the opinion of the district attorney's office.

The district attorney said last night, however, that as expected to pay a second visit to the Danvers State Hospital to see Sullivan before the grand jury came in next June. On his last visit to the hospital Sullivan declined to talk to Foley, but he hopes that when he visits him again he will be in a better frame of mind.

Auto Driver's Alibi Wins Newton Court Prize

"I couldn't afford to stop. I had my helper with me and I pay him $1.50 an hour."

The alibi drew first prize in Newton court today for auto excuses and was contributed by Patrick J. Keefe, a roofer, of Lyman st., Waltham, charged with failing to stop before entering Washington st. from Park st., Newton.

Judge Charles J. Brown rewarded the novelty by placing the case on file, but only after a lecture on obedience to traffic signs.

Answering a question as to the meaning of the stop sign, Keefe said he understood the word "Stop."

"They said to stop driving, but it didn't stop."

Judge Brown nodded assent.

THANK CURLEY FOR LIFTING BAN

City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park today thanked Mayor Curley for the quick action in restoring water service to 30 Hyde Park families for failure of Mrs. Eva Mendelsohn of Brookline, Medinah, to pay her water bills.

The service was restored by the mayor and he ordered that a complaint be asked for the non-payment rather than deprive innocent tenants of the supply.

"I want to thank the Mayor for the humanitarian manner in which he handled the vexing problem of collecting water bills from landlords, without inconveniencing innocent tenants," the statement read.

"Unlike other years when water was shut off and families suffered, the Mayor immediately ordered that under no consideration should water be shut off for over 24 hours and then only after tenants had ample opportunity to obtain water enough to do them for the period.

"This morning I brought the Mayor's attention to the fact that it was rumored that water was to be shut off in two Hyde Park homes where sickness was involved and he immediately issued orders that in no home was water to be turned off where there was sickness."

Pilgrim's Progress Given to Governor

Rev. William H. Matthews of New York, general secretary of the American Tract Society, today presented Governor Allen with a copy of the tercentenary edition of The Pilgrim's Progress, published by the American Tract Society of Boston. Rev. Mr. Matthews was introduced by Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, representing the Boston organization.

Senate Calls for Constitution Quiz

On the heels of the House Ways and Means Committee's decision to do nothing this year in the way of tax law revision, the Senate adopted an order calling for a joint session of the two branches to consider two constitutional questions. One relates to a tax on intangible property and the other for a reapportionment of the senatorial, representative and councilor districts.

BOGAN DEFENDS SCHOOLHOUSE

A protest against statements of the Brook Farm Civic Association of West Roxbury that children were forced to attend school in "rat-infested and insanitary rooms of the American Legion" was made today by Dr. Frederick L. Bogan, chairman of the committee on schools, for the West Roxbury Citizens' Association.

"There is one class in the legion room, a fifth grade," he said. "My son, Frederick Jr., attended there and we never found the conditions charged, it is a large airy room with widows on three sides for sunlight," he said.

He said his association has urged and understands now that money is to be available for a new school in Temple st., in the section involved. Dr. Bogan served on the Boston School Committee for ten years, five yars as chairman.

WOMEN CALL FOR PERSONAL LAW OBSERVANCE IN HOMES

CLUB SESSION POINTS DUTY TO NATION

Three Days' Convention at Swampscott Comes to Its End Today

By NANCY BREWSTER

A call for personal law observance in the home was sounded today at the annual convention of the State Federation of Women Clubs in Swampscott by Mrs. Robert J. Culbert, chairman of the law observance committee of the federation.

The committee report read by Mrs. Culbert, marked the opening business of the convention which has been in session at the New Ocean House for the past three days.

"The success of the law observance branch of our work," declared Mrs. Culbert, "depends upon the amount of cooperation every clubwoman in the country is willing to give us, for it takes for its purpose the teaching of law observance in the home.

"From the first, we should bear in mind that law enforcement is a legislative duty, while law observance is personal.

"What we do in our home affects our family, our community and our nation. We have been pointing out the fact to our youth that to break a law is not the way to change it. The Constitution provides a more orderly procedure if we do not believe in a law, but as long as that law is on our statute books we must respect it, regardless of our personal sentiment."

PRESENTS SUCCESSOR

Before the convention adjourned, the retiring president, Mrs. Axel A. Packard presented Mrs. Carl A. Schrader of Belmont, her successor in office.

"We are road-builders" declared Mrs. Schrader in her maiden address, "and we must see to it that those roads, which our children and grandchildren will in the future use, are good roads.

"We must make those roads paths of peace and universal understanding."

The last vote placed on record by the Swampscott convention was approval of a gift of $100 to the M. S. P. C. C. for the moral education of girls in recognition of the service to the federation for the past three years of Mrs. Albert Bradley Carter, chairman of its social service committee.

Hub Prelates Bring Gifts From Pope to Cardinal

Greater Boston Catholics today awaited with an anticipatory thrill the return of Monsignors Francis A. Burke, diocesan chancellor, and Joseph F. McGlinchey, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Lynn, from Rome with the priceless relics of the Passion presented through them by Pope Pius XI to Cardinal O'Connell.

The two prelates led the pilgrimage from this port to Carthage, Rome and Oberammergau three weeks ago aboard the steamship Rochambeau, and were presented with the relics by the Pope at a special audience.

CARDINAL PRAISED

The occasion of the presentation was marked by a glowing tribute paid to Cardinal O'Connell by the Pontiff, in which he lauded the faith of the Boston diocese and its foremost place in support of missionary work among the dioceses of the world.

Monsignor Francis J. Spellman, formerly of Brighton, now an attache of the Papal Secretary of State, after the private audience of Monsignors Burke and McGlinchey with the Pope, led the lay pilgrims into evening audience with the Pope, the first privilege of its kind ever extended by him to Vatican visitors.

SEE FAMOUS RELICS.

The unprecedented evening audience proved a fitting climax to the stay of the Boston pilgrims in the Holy City. Through special permission they were also allowed to see a nail and the inscription from the cross, the crown of thorns and the finger of St. Thomas the Apostle at the church of the Holy Cross.

They were conducted on this tour by Mons. Spellman, who explained the objects to them and all points of related interest.

During their stay in Rome the Boston party was extended the unusual privilege by the Pope of gaining extraordinary indulgences by making prescribed visits to the basilica of Mary Major and the basilica of St. Peter at which they joined in congregational recitation of the rosary.

PLEADS GUILTY TO HOLDUP

Neil Courtney, 28, held by Cambridge police as an alleged chainstore bandit, was identified by two Roxbury storekeepers today as the gunman who held up and robbed them of a total of $107 within the past 10 days.

Courtney pleaded guilty to the holdups of John McNamara, a Cambridge chain store manager, and was held in $5000 and was taken to jail.

While his bride of three months was making ready in their South End apartment to take a trip to Fall River, Courtney was captured by Patrolman Putnam, Cambridge, after a fierce hand-to-hand tussle with William Stapleton, manager of a store in that district, whom he is alleged to have beaten with a blackjack.

The two Roxbury men, Louis Karton of 1965 Washington st., and William Tully, of 753 Shawmut ave., picked Courtney out of a lineup at the Cambridge police station as the man who held them up on May 7 and May 13, respectively, robbing Karton of $67 and Tully of $40.

Mayor Gets Survey on Paving Needs

In an effort to serve each ward fairly, Mayor Curley today instructed Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke to send out two groups of four men each to decide independently on the five most accepted streets in each district that should be resurfaced and paved under the 1930 street program.

Fair and Warmer Weather for Boston

With the exit of the low pressure area that brought yesterday's rain of 1.06 inches, the weather man today predicted fair weather with rising temperatures tonight. One section of the area moved seaward and the other headed north toward the St. Lawrence valley. A high and comfortable humidity will continue for a day or so, anyway, he predicted, with the advent of a warm southwest wind.

Gov. Allen Endorses Hub 'Y' Swim Drive

The free swimming campaign which the Boston Y. M. C. A. is planning to conduct May 19 to 31, for all boys and men 18 years of age and above, was today indorsed by Governor Allen.

KIN OF MOODY HONOR MEMORY

Commemorating the 75th anniversary of the conversion of the internationally known evangelist Dwight L. Moody, a tablet marking the site where he was converted was unveiled at 43 School st., by his descendants at noon.

The event was an impressive one and attracted throngs of interested persons to the scene at the height of the business day.

An account of Moody's life was read by A. P. Fitt, of Northfield, a son-in-law, following which the tablet was unveiled by A. C. Moody, a nephew. Prayers were then offered by Rev. Sidney Lovett, pastor of the Mount Vernon Congregational Church, which Moody joined following his conversion.

Also present at the ceremony were officers and trustees of the Northfield schools founded by Moody 50 years ago. These include I. Elliott Speer, president, Arthur Percy Fitt, Arthur Perry, Jr., and I. L. Grandon.

Moody stated his career in Boston as shoe store salesman 75 years ago as an employee of his uncle, Samuel Holton.

HARBOR ROAD TO HULL URGED

Appointment of a special commission to investigate the feasibility of having constructed, either by the state or some private interest, a road from Squantum to Hull across Boston harbor, was urged today by speakers before the joint rules committees of the legislature.

Representative Edward J. Sanderry of Quincy claimed that three-fourths of the fill for the road would come from the scows once a zip-rap had been put in place. He estimated the cost under $100,000.

Others to favor the appointment of a commission were Senators Donald W. Nicholson of Wareham and Elbert M. Crockett of Milford Reps. William R. Thomas of Quincy, Edward J. Nutting of Leominster, Edgar T. Brickett of Conasset and Attorney Joseph A. Conway, town counsel for Hull.

Atlantic Refining Co. to Expand for Tercentenary

In anticipation of more than 1,000,000 autoists visiting Boston during the tercentenary celebration this summer, the Atlantic Refining Co. is planning to open six new service stations of its own and to arrange for 50 additional dealers in the Greater Boston area.

Details of the company's activities were announced today at he local offices in the Park Square Building by Joseph R. Rollins, advertising manager, who is here from the company's headquarters in Philadelphia to put into effect an extensive newspaper advertising campaign linking up the tercentenary with autoists.

"Our company realizes" said Rollins, that the Boston tercentenary means increased business for our products. Increased business means that we must expand our activities and thereby provide employment for many more men. We are using 446 newspapers from Massachusetts to Florida on the Atlantic seaboard, calling attention to the tercentenary and incidentally advertising our products."

With the six new stations, the company will have a total of 30 in the Boston area. As an accommodation to visiting motorists each of these stations will carry the tercentenary flag, indicating that it is an information bureau for the period.

Joseph R. Rollins, advertising manager, who is directing the newspaper advertising campaign of the Atlantic Refining Co. in the opening of six new service stations for the 1,000,000 autoists expected here for the Tercentenary.

PARKER JOINS COURTESY DRIVE

Registrar Follows Police Head in a Move to Aid Visiting Automobile Owners

Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker today joined the campaign for courtesy to visiting motorists during the Tercentenary celebration.

Registrar Parker appealed to automobile drivers of this state to assist in making the stay of tourists so agreeable that they will have a fine impression of Boston and Massachusetts.

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman has already instructed the police to exercise patience with visitors who mistakenly violate automobile regulations.

Commissioner Hultman added he would stress the importance of the order by having it read in each station house every week.

"Give every courtesy you can to visiting motorists," said Registrar Parker. "Make their stay here happy. Don't crowd their cars off the road. Be forbearing if they stop their cars at cross streets to inquire directions. Treat them with kindness.

"I am sure traffic officers will join in this movement to make the stay of these visiting motorists happy. We want these strangers within our gates to regard Boston and Massachusetts as a place where courtesy and kindness abound, where fellowship reigns and where regard for the rights of others on our highways is uppermost in our minds.

"We want our visitors to leave for their homes with a fine impression of the Athens of America."

Commissioner Hultman said his personal desire was to aid visitors in every way possible.

"Visiting motorists will make mistakes in Boston streets," he said. "I make mistakes myself. I expect the officers to understand the difference between honest mistakes and deliberate violations, and use their best judgment accordingly.

"I may have more to say about the Tercentenary situation later. It is a subject which deserves considerable study. I want the police to bear in mind that many strangers are coming here, and to use every effort to be courteous and helpful to them."

Why You Should Never Cut a Corn

If you are troubled with corns or callouses, do not run the risk of blood poisoning by paring them. Statistics show that many deaths have occurred from this seemingly innocent practice of cutting corns.

Simply go to your druggist and get a few cents' worth of Iso-Hist, rub a little on any painful corn or callous. Immediately the pain will disappear and in a short time the corn or callous can be loosen and lift off easily with the fingers—root and all—leaving the surrounding skin in a healthy normal condition.

Iso-Hist together with the fact that Iso-Hist overcomes such affections as sore, tired, aching, puffed or burning feet will make feet and ankles feel as fine as they look, is the hearty endorsement given it by druggists.

To rid one's feet of every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes or painful callouses, to take a step without pain, simply remember the magic of Iso-Hist for anyone to do a corn and foot is are warned to stop it.

Harvard Men to Don Pilgrim Garb for Reunion

Members of the Harvard class of 1930 will wear Pilgrim costumes in keeping with the spirit of Tercentenary year when they meet next June to celebrate their decennial reunion.

PANAMAS MORE IN DEMAND

The "Bull-Nose" Panama, fashioned after the narrow-brimmed felts which proved so popular during the fall and winter, will be among the best sellers of the season, according to Boston hat salesmen.

The extremely narrow brim measures 1¾ inches in front and 1⅝ on the sides and rear with a high roll behind.

Panamas of every variety are more in demand this season than ever before. It is expected they will rival in popularity the sailor straws which have been so much in evidence in other years. Leghorns draped with silken bands of every hue will have their adherents, but are not expected to be in great demand.

And gone are the gaudy bands which have graced summer head gear in past seasons. The conservative black bands of varying width will prevail.

KEN HARLAN TO TAKE 3D BRIDE

The girl who has smiled on thousands of motorists from billboards will smile on a husband next Monday with the wedding of Kenneth Harlan, movie actor, and Cora Hilda Booth of College ave., Somerville.

Miss Booth, selected as his model by MacClelland Barclay, the artist, from a group of style show models, will be married at the home of the actor's parents, Lamona st., Los Angeles, according to a telegram received today by her mother, Mrs. B. H. Caswell.

She met Harlan last September through Don Gould of the movie colony.

Harlan has been married twice, once to Marie Provost. The wedding will be the first for Miss Booth. Marriage intentions showed Harlan's age as 35 and Miss Booth's as 23.

Miss Booth is a daughter of Mrs. Caswell by a previous marriage. Her father is employed in a Lynn furniture store, according to the mother.

Five years ago she entered a shoe style show and attracted the attention of MacClelland Barclay, who induced her to pose for magazine illustrations in New York.

She met Gould in New York, and after working in various cities as a model for illustrators made her way to the coast.

'YOUNG MAN OF MANHATTAN' PROVES GENUINE ENTERTAINMENT AT MET

FILM BASED ON BEST SELLER

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THANKS TO THE SPIRITED pen of Katherine Brush, to the able direction of Monta Bell, and to the acting of Charlie Ruggles and a few others, "Young Man of Manhattan" has fared far better on screen than most of the pictures made from best-sellers. The photoplay is now to be seen at the Metropolitan. It is bright and entertaining, has good dialogue, is superbly photographed, and steps along smartly.

MISS BRUSH WROTE a mighty good story. She tapped out of her typewriter—and her brain—a fine word painting of newspaper people. As a former typewriter-man of the press," Mr. Bell has evidently taken pride in trying to throw something of the former Boston person—woman's genius upon the silver sheet. He has, in part, failed; Claudette Colbert perhaps deliberately, thinking he should sacrifice characterization to camera speed. Movies based upon classy printed thought rarely toe the mark. Even the skilled Mr. Bell has "muffed" opportunities in this tale of the lives of sporting writers, and of the love of a film reviewer. Fiction readers, who are also fans, will note that the director "plays down" the affair between Ann and Knowles. Nothing that is shown establishes this vital motivation satisfactorily. Yet, judged as a whole, "Young Man of Manhattan" has come through the studio mill with genuine excellence stamped upon it. It ought to prove a box office success.

Claudette Colbert

ANN (CLAUDETTE COLBERT) meets Toby McLean (Norman Foster), gin-loving sports writer, after the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Philadelphia. Toby proves a peptic wooer, and wins Ann, pens faster on the payroll than he, and is soon paying the household bills. Love takes on a triangular aspect with the injection of Dwight Knowles (Leslie Austin), publisher who signs up Ann for a series of special articles. It becomes a quadrangle with the arrival of Jane, society girl. Puff Randolph (Ginger Rogers), infatuated with Toby. The wedded pair separate, and Ann is united after Ann 'a made blind by liquor which Toby had left behind him when he went in Florida to cover baseball.

IN GENERAL MR. BELL has transmitted to the screen the breath of life of Miss Brush's novel. He has done a creditable job at direction. He uses his cameras effectively, sometimes perfectly.

OF THE CAST Mr. Ruggles turns in another of his "drunken reporter" roles. But he is as ever good, and always makes the most of his lines and "business." Miss Colbert is a fascinating film reviewer (much as Miss Brush used to be in real life, if we may be so bold as to say it!)

ON STAGE, are to be seen and heard Horace Heidt and his Californians, noted band. Mr. Martel offers at the organ "Ringside shorts, also. Seats.

"Oh, Tell Me, Pretty Maiden"

IN MARION DAVIES' LATEST "TALKIE"

THIS IS ONE of the many drawings which John Held, Jr., greatest present-day exponent of wood engravings, made for "The Floradora Girl," Marion Davies' new all-talking, singing picture.

ARTIST MAKES DRAWINGS FOR MARION DAVIES' 'FLORADORA'

In the gay '90s, when the Floradora Girl was all the rage, rotogravure and half-tones in newspapers were almost as much a dream of the future as were aeroplanes and horseless carriages. Instead, chalk plates and wood engravings were the vogue. So it was only natural that John Held, Jr., greatest present-day exponent of wood engravings, should have been chosen to make drawing for "The Floradora Girl," Marion Davies' new all-talking, singing picture of life in that colorful period. Everything in connection with "The Floradora Girl" is in keeping with the times.

Mr. Held comes naturally by wood engraving, his father having been an engraver before him. The son has done a bit of sculpture and a bit of water color, a bit of oil, a bit of short story writing, a little book creating—his "Grim Youth" is only his first book—as well as his wood-cutting. But he was in perfect shape for the job when the call came that he was needed to saw off a few wood-cuts for Miss Davies' "The Floradora Girl."

This latest starring vehicle for the actress who has been called the first comedienne of the screen," is a romantic and humorous drama of the love affair of one of the original "Floradora" sextette—unrevealed without the aid of any of the original members of the sextette, it may be mentioned.

It depicts life in the days when bicycling was the fashionable means of locomotion; when the kids yelled "get a horse" at the occasional appearance of a "horseless carriage"; when stage-door Johnnies were popular.

Miss Davies is supported in the glamorous and exciting movie by Lawrence Gray, Walter Catlett, Louis John Bartels, Jed Prouty, Clause Allister, Sam Hardy and many others. Harry Beaumont directed from the story and dialogue by Gene Markey.

Mr. Held's wood-cuts have no roles in the picture, but they play an important part outside it.

HONOR BOSTON WRITER

Newspaper folk of Boston yesterday paid honor to one of their number who has stepped out of the editorial room into the literary field and has made good with a big bang. This author is Miss Katherine Brush, already a big light and evidently set to become a brighter star in her new profession (as token of friendship and joy in her success, 55 editors, reporters, reviewers of film and drama and others tendered Miss Bush a dinner at the Coconanut Grove, Joe Toye, humorist, and after-dinner speaker de luxe, presided.

RAMON NOVARRO TO STAR IN ABDULLAH STORY

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, MAY 15—Ah any columnist needs to do to question the popularity of Ramon Novarro is to leave his name out of a list of popular stars. Wowie! The mail next day is filled with letters calling attention to the grave omission. Ramon is now in New York studying with Louis Graveure to further perfect his voice for the screen. When he returns home he will find waiting for him a story specially written by Achmed Abdullah, a writer of stories of the Orient.

Mr. Abdullah is calling his drama for Novarro "Song of India" and, of course, it will have an Oriental background. Abdullah is an unique figure among artists, a Persian educated in France, who won his literary fame writing in the French language.

Louella O. Parsons

I should not be surprised if Abdullah would come out here to supervise his original story, the first he has written for the screen.

WE OFTEN TALK about one million dollars, but when it comes right down to the actual cash in hand it is an easy to get as most people think even in the movies. Amos 'n' Andy, whose sensational and altogether phenomenal success over the radio has brought them to the screen, will receive a check for $1,000,000 for 30 days' work at the R. K. O. studios. This pleasant little amount is paid to them both because they will broadcast from the studio and make movies then. The Amos 'n' Andy comedy will be called "Check and Double Check" and Bert Kalmer and Harry Ruby are writing the songs. Mel Brown will direct and you can count on this reviewer's visiting the set just to take a look at these two radio wizards.

"Ingagi" Comes to Majestic on Monday

Sir Hubert Winstead, F. A. S., anthropologist and big game hunter; with Capt. Daniel Swayne, a young American, collector of museum specimens, headed the safari whose adventures are seen in "Ingagi," African picture, to be seen Monday at the Majestic.

Sir Hubert is a student of the anthropoids, such as the gorilla, and in the picture are recorded such scenes as the capture of a big bull gorilla. Sir Hubert makes no actual claims as yet regarding his big game discoveries. He presents what was recorded by the camera and leaves it to the world to decide.

The photography was recorded by Ed Joyce.

MR. BOSTON — by JACK CONWAY

FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000 — FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1930 — FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000

B. C. Nine Plays New Hampshire at Heights

Babe Ruth Still Darling With Baseball Crowd

MR. BOSTON was talking about the Red Sox and the Yanks with Joe Cashman.

"You may expect to find me out at Fenway Park watching Babe Ruth in action," said Mr Boston. "I must confess that the great Bambino gives me a greater thrill than any other ball player. He even looks good clothing out.

"Babe has made millions for the baseball owners by his tremendous batting and by the hold he has on the public. In addition to being a mighty ball player, the Babe is very human. He is still very much a boy at heart and everybody who has come in contact with him loves him.

"I travelled with the Sox back in the days when he played under the Frazee banner. It was in 1918 when with the Sox that Babe Ruth first showed signs of being a great home run hitter. He got 19 home runs that season while dividing his time between playing the outfield, pitching and holding down first base.

"In a World's Series game against the Cubs in 1918 Babe played all of those three positions.

"Once Ruth started hitting he didn't want to be a pitcher and he could not play regularly.

"The Babe has done a great deal over a period of 18 years and has reached the heights he cannot help but be and still has been a big leaguer in the game which is true of the leaders in every other sport and also in business.

"The Yanks have drawn record crowds this year. The magnetic pull of Ruth has had much to do with this condition."

Jack Conway

Buckley's Stable Hits a Winning Stride

BILLY HENDERSON dropped in to see Mr Boston with some literature in regard to the Johnny Buckley stable of boxers. Henderson, who once managed Eddie Shevlin, has become the right eye of the Buckley fistic outfit.

"We had four boxers in action on Monday night and each of them won," said Henderson. "At Baltimore, Henry Lamar won from Harry Gallagher in a stirring 10-round bout, Donahue beat Bonaparte at Salem, Minevsyk upset Herman in Boston, while O'Connor disposed of Garcia at Holyoke.

"The success of our boxers has been due to their fine physical condition. Johnny Buckley and myself keep the boys stepping in the gym and so they are at their best when they sweep into action."

Lamar Will Prove Leader in Heavyweight Group

"Lamar is going to prove himself a great heavyweight," declared Mr. Boston. "He is a finished boxer and since he increased his weight to 190 pounds he has been hitting hard.

"Lamar is only 24 years of age. He has come along slowly, much like Gene Tunney did. He now appears ready to shoot for the big money. On the form he displayed against Gallagher, who is a first-class boxer, Lamar must be rated with the first 10 in the heavyweight group.

"I would like to see Lamar in action against Jim Maloney or Ernie Schaaf. Maloney knocked out Lamar a couple of years ago when the latter was a light heavyweight. The heavier Lamar believes he can even the score with Shamus.

"A bout between Maloney and Schaaf will be a summer feature. Lamar against either Shamus or Schaaf would also pull a big gate. Jack Gagnon, now that he has knocked out Tuffy Griffith, would look him in if pitted against a suitable opponent.

"Boston fans have already ordered $50,000 worth of tickets for the Sharkey-Schmeling bout, which takes place in New York on June 12. Which proves that a first-class ring attraction still has a tremendous pull on the public. The show is certain to draw at least a million dollars.

"Those pessimists who claimed that the million-dollar gate passed with Dempsey will have to take it on the chin."

Rosenberg Stars

Harry Rosenberg, left fielder of the Missions, led his team to victory in its heavy attack on two Seattle southpaws. Lamanski and Finch. The final score was 13 to 8. The Missions got 22 hits, and Rosenberg's contribution was two singles and two doubles.

BEATEN IN FINALS

reason, the cup was at the fair American's lips, but, just as in the 1929 final with Joyce Wethered, the potion she quaffed was no better than the dregs. The nectar of victory had been claimed by another.

Worst Defeat of Glenna's Career

Her defeat was the most disastrous she has sustained since coming to international prominence almost 10 years ago. Apparently feeling the reaction of her bitter matches with the two ranking stars of English golf, Glenna played as poor a round of golf as she has shown in recent years, taking an 86 this morning to be 5 down to an inexperienced juvenile, of whom even the most sanguine in the pro-British gallery had had not great illusions.

Miss Fishwick, in fact, had been quoted at 1 to 8 when she started out on the American this morning, but rapidly claimed the spotlight as she played steady, if not inspired golf, to take advantage of Miss Collett's mistakes which were many and sometimes glaring. She was generally weak with her irons and, on the few occasions when her pitches obeyed her will, her putting came forward to betray it. Twice she missed three-footers and one a two-footer. In all, she won only six holes of the 33 played.

Many of the others were halved but Miss Fishwick, shooting a 41 39—80 for the morning round, won enough of them on the incoming nine to be 3 up at the luncheon interval, an almost impregnable position. Of the last nine holes played, she had won four and Glenna none at all.

So the obscure Miss Fishwick, about to succeed where the more illustrious Molly and Enid had failed, promptly became the darling of the gallery which scenting the sensational triumph to come, followed avidly in her wake throughout the afternoon round and gave her an ovation when finally she brought the match to a close on the 33rd green.

U. S. Girl's Bid Comes Too Late

By this time, and in fact through out the last half of the round Glenna had certainly lost much of her touch. She went to the turn in 37, one over par. But so did Miss Fishwick, in consequence of which the American's bid came too late.

Last year, she played great golf only to lose to a great champion. This time, she played mediocre golf where even reasonably sound golf might have prevailed against a finalist as inexperienced as Diana Not that the latter wasn't sound herself. She played good, fighting golf all the way, but it was far from the kind of that might have licked some of its inspiration if it hadn't received the added assurance of seeing her favorite go so far so fast, hole after hole.

The cards:

N. Y. Commission Gives Max License

New York, May 16 (INS)—The New York Boxing Commission today approved Max Schmeling's application for a license to fight in this state.

The commission's action was taken following a telephone call from the German heavyweight's training camp at Endicott, N. Y., in which he said he had accepted the terms of the contract offered him by Madison Square Garden.

The commission's approval of Max's application restores him to good graces in this state and makes him eligible to meet Jack Sharkey, the heavyweight boxing championship of the world for the benefit of the milk fund at the Yankee Stadium June 12.

Japan Davis Cup Team Beats India

London, May 18 (INS)—The Japanese Davis cup tennis team advanced to the third round of play in the elimination matches in the European zone today by defeating India, 3—0.

The Japanese after capturing two singles matches clinched victory by taking the doubles match today.

Two singles matches remain to be played tomorrow, but their outcome will have no bearing on the series result.

Pairings in Walker Cup Matches Today

Sandwich, England, May 16 (U.S.)—Pairings in today's Walker Cup singles matches, to be played over the Royal St. George championship course, are:

Harrison Johnston vs. Cyril Tolley. (Both native amateur champions.)

Bobby Jones vs. Roger Wethered. (Walker Cup team captains.)

George von Elm vs. Rex W. Hartley.

George Voight vs. Sir E. W. F. Holderness.

Dr. Oscar F. Willing vs. J. Nelson Smith.

Francis Ouimet vs. T. A. Torrance.

Don Moe vs. J. A. Stout.

Roland MacKenzie vs. William Campbell.

CENTRAL WINS W. G. A. TITLE

Results Today

Central 5, Brae Burn 4.
Northern 6, Midland 3.
Southern 7, The Country Club 2.

By BILL GRIMES

For the fifth time the Central District won the Women's Golf Association of Boston team match championship by defeating Brae Burn today at Weston.

To a certain extent the Central victory was marred, for Mrs. M. E. Philbrick of Brae Burn failed to put in an appearance and forfeited her match with Mrs. A. G. Carver.

Central won its first W. G. A. championship in 1924, and after Northern had taken the title the following year came back and won in 1926, '27 and '28.

Last year Brae Burn finished out in front, and the new champions came through this spring by winning seven consecutive matches after a poor start.

The Southern District ran up a 7-to-2 victory over The Country Club at Clyde Park course, Brookline, in which Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., the district champion, won her 10th straight match, thereby running her string of unbroken victories in spring series competition to 21.

Work on Harvard Field House Begun

Work was started yesterday at Harvard on the new Dillon Field house at Soldiers Field. Certain portions of the locker building, made possible by a gift of $300,000 by Clarence Dillon, '95, of New York city, will be ready for occupancy, September 15.

The entire structure will be completed on the day of the Army-Harvard football game, October 18, it was stated by Williams J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard.

U. S. Wins Walker Cup Matches, 10 to 2

By HARRY R. FLORY

Sandwich, England, May 16—Giving Britain's finest golfers the worst trouncing ever received on British soil, America today retained the Walker Cup by the overwhelming score of ten matches to two.

It was the second worst rout in the eight years' history of international play for the famous trophy. Only once before were the British so completely overwhelmed, and that was at Chicago in 1928, when America won 11 matches and Britain but a single one.

For the sixth time in succession, America vindicated its right to possession of the famed Walker Cup.

With three points already chalked up in yesterday's foursomes, only four victories were needed today to enable the American Eagle to keep its claws firmly clenched on the coveted trophy.

These victories were reeled off in quick succession, with the English going down to overwhelming defeat beneath the inspired clubs of the American invaders. Bobby Jones captained his team to his brilliant victory by a personal triumph, defeating his rival captain, Roger Wethered nine up and eight to play.

The rout of the Britishers was almost complete. George Voight defeated Sir Ernest Holderness by the overwhelming score of ten up and eight to play, while Harrison Johnston, American national amateur champion, downed the dangerous Cyril Tolley five and four.

George Von Elm brought in the winning match which gave America the right to retain the cup by defeating Rex Hartley, winner of the St George's vase tournament last week, three and two in a bitterly contested match.

The first British victory to be recorded was that of T. A. Torrance over Francis Ouimet. The Englishman, who made such a brilliant showing in the foursomes yesterday, overwhelmed Ouimet with a superlative brand of golfing skill winning seven up and six to play.

British Under Big Handicap Today

The British started out on the all-important singles under terrific handicap of only 1 point against 3, the result of America's foursomes wins over the British teams in the foursomes yesterday. An even break in these opening games would have given the contenders a better chance, but as things stood they needed a miracle to achieve their lifelong ambition of lifting the cup from America.

While America had won four of the five first matches, it soon was quite apparent the invaders were going to clinch the victory by an overwhelming margin. Roland MacKenzie was 8 up on William Campbell at the 27th, while Dr. O. F. Willing was fighting off the one-hole lead held by John Nelson Smith at the start of the afternoon round.

The doctor squared the score on the first nine holes of the afternoon, and got to the turn 1 up on his opponent.

FIRST GAME FOR EAGLES IN 2 WEEKS

Boston College meets the strong University of New Hampshire nine at University Heights this afternoon.

Despite a two-week layoff, the Eagles have not suffered. At least this is made apparent from the practice work that the Eagles have been displaying.

Hughie Duffy, B. C. coach, has made use of the rest to whip his team into mid-season shape and to polish up a number of spots, plays and players that were looking rather drab when the Eagles last played a ball game with Boston University two weeks ago.

New Hampshire has one of its best nines this spring, but shouldn't defeat the renewed Eagles, who are anxious to play ball again and to play it as they should have all during this campaign.

Capt. Peter Herman is due to chuck for Boston College today, with Jim "Shaker" O'Connor being saved until tomorrow's contest at Newton with Villanova.

Brilliant Mat Card at Garden

The most brilliant wrestling card of the season will be presented at the Garden next Thursday night, when Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight champion of the world, defends his title and $10,000 diamond studded belt against Henri Digiane, French flash.

ROSE NEW A. A. HEAD AT YALE

New Haven, Ct., May 16—The retirement of Prof. George H. Nettleton from the chairmanship of the board of control of the Yale Athletic Association was announced last night, together with the statement that Prof. R. Selden Rose, Yale, 1909, of the Yale faculty, has been elected his successor.

Prof. Nettleton has been chairman of the board of control since 1925, succeeding Prof. Clarence W. Mendell, who retired to become dean of Yale College.

Prof. Nettleton will leave this city for France soon after the close of the present year and will spend his sabbatical year in Europe.

Balko Wins Rich Stake at Belmont

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 16 (US)—Balko came spinning down the broad Widener course yesterday and galloped to victory in the Rich toboggan handicap, the feature of the opening day at Belmont Park.

Balko, which is owned by Mrs. Margaret Amory, who races under the Nom de Course of the Sagamore stable, was spiral with Osmand in the betting, though the Widener gelding carried the bulk of the money. For his victory Balko brought the owner $8650.

Walters Is a Big Help to Portland

Junk Walters assisted Portland more than a little on May 6 when the Beavers won the first game of a double-header from the Hollywood Stars by the score of 8 to 3. Walters pitched and batted his team to a victory in the opener, allowing the Stars 12 hits, which he kept scattered, and making two safeties, one being a home run in the eighth inning with two men on.

"H" TRACKMEN OFF TO HANOVER

Forty Harvard trackmen left Cambridge today for Hanover, N. H., for the dual meet with Dartmouth on Saturday.

With his best of track and field stars in perfect condition, Coach Eddie Farrell predicted a Harvard victory on the Dartmouth track tomorrow.

Dartmouth anticipates revenge for the licking Harvard gave the Green indoors last winter, and accordingly Harvard can expect a battle in every event.

Apparently satisfied that his star sophomore pole vaulter has at last recovered from injuries received earlier in the season, Farrell will enter young Oscar Sutermeister in the pole vault.

B. U.-Springfield Clash Tomorrow

Coach Joe Gilmore will start Mannie Barrish, former Boston English high school sixman against Springfield Y. M. C. A. College tomorrow afternoon, when the "Y" nine visits Boston University in a return game.

The Terrier coach is taking a chance on Barrish, but it looks as though it will be a good gamble. The only game Barrish has started all year was against Springfield, and he was knocked out of the box, which would make it seem foolish to start him again.

Heavy Track Will Make Tannery Choice in Ky. Derby

GALLANT FOX NEEDS DRY FOOTING

By SAM R. WHITMIRE

Louisville, Ky., May 16 (US)—I have no option but to select for the Kentucky Derby to be run here tomorrow, if the track is fast, good, or slow:

1—Gallant Fox, Earle Sande.
2—Crack Brigade, George Ellis.
3—Gallant Knight, Herman Schutte.

Should more rain fall and the track be sloppy to heavy, I do not believe Gallant Fox would be started, because he was never even pressed on a wet track until he arrived in Louisville this week. Therefore no one knows how he would perform.

With the colt absent I would choose:

1—Tannery, Willie Garner.
2—Gone Away, Mark Garner.
3—Gallant Knight, Herman Schutte.

These three would be exactly suited by adverse track conditions.

Usually we have had the task of figuring three to a half a dozen horses in the Derby, but this year, with favorable footing, Gallant Fox is a most decided standout, and I see no reason why he should reverse places with the other most likely candidates.

There is plenty of foundation in facts and figures to point to his superiority.

This Churchhill Downs course is an old-fashioned track set against true racing, because the turns are abrupt—change too suddenly for a horse to maintain highest speed the stretch is too short for a horse to make a determined run, and the turns are not banked as highly as on modern tracks, this making it difficult to hold a very strong horse to the outer edge around.

Therefore, although we know Gallant Fox is fast, he will not be able to make his very best speed against the odds pointed out. The longer quarter-mile to the finish turn will give Sande room in which to place his mount, however.

Gallant Fox Has Plenty of Courage

Gallant Fox has lived up to all the splendid performances and traditions of the head of his family-tree, the noble Sir Gallahad, named for the famous knight of the Round Table, and representing purity of life, which he certainly did in the horse kingdom.

Suffering from supreme nervousness at the start of the Woods Memorial and the victim of several pockets and other interferences in the early stages of the Preakness, Gallant Fox was courageous enough to overcome all obstacles and go on to triumph in each stake.

A less stout-hearted horse would have been defeated in both. No keen watcher of his two 1930 performances can find any point to quibble on his stamina and courage.

I don't care what happens in the running of the Derby, I rely with utmost confidence on the rare ability of Jockey Sande, and the steel-like resolutions of the colt to make light of whatever might be attempted to prevent a clean and so easy victory.

The whip was only raised once on Gallant Fox in his two stake victories — Woods Memorial and Preakness. After he had raced beside Crack Brigade too well into the stretch at Pimlico, Sande gave him one tap with his whip—that was all.

The others in both races were whipped, booted and lambasted without result — they were not present with the goods.

Crack Brigade, second to Gallant Fox in the Wood and in the Preakness, possesses ample merit to get the call for place in the Derby. Knockers here say this Light Brigade colt has staled since the Preakness.

Ted will see this colt fighting every step of the way and mud would not pester him.

Kentucky Money Down on Tannery

Kentucky money will pour in on Ed F. Pritchard's $50,000 Tannery, fast sprinter, Willie Garner to ride, but I can't see the son of Sailor sticking for Derby distance, unless the track should be deep in mud. All of his family were superior in mud.

Col. Phil Chinn, wisest of Kentucky horsemen, says Tannery will win, but his best workout in 2:09 4-5 was about two seconds slower than Gone Away's 2:08 a week before he left New York.

Gallant Knight's trick of a mile in 1:39 4-5 was good, but when we saw Schutte whipping him out at that distance, we question the E. R. Jones colt's ability to stick for another quarter. But he is very steady in mud and more rain would brighten his chances. His best 1929 races were won in heavy going.

Chuck Burns, San Antonio socker, will arrive here today for his 10-round battle with Paul Pantaleo, latest heavyweight sensation, to be held at the Garden Monday night in conjunction with the Diamond Belt Tourney.

Pantaleo is expected to arrive here tonight or tomorrow morning to wind up his training at one of the local gyms.

Elimination bouts in the Diamond Belt series will be continued in the preliminaries.

I. U. Lacrosse Team Plays Tech Today

Boston University's lacrosse team will attempt to defeat the Massachusetts Institute of Technology outfit for the second successive year when the two meet in their annual game at the Tech field today.

The Terriers, with a veteran team, will have Bert Grodberg, g; Charlie McCready, p; Arnold Kahn, c, Art McCarthy, 1d; John Cavanaugh, 2d; Jack Acomb, 3d; David Berns, c, Jack Clifford, Jr., Fred Lindenfeld, 2a; Barney Shankman, p; Leo Waxman, ah, and Shorty Barron, 1h.

MIDDLEBURY PLAYS TUFTS

Tufts will try to get back into the win column this afternoon at the Oval when it plays host to the Middlebury nine which is said to be stronger than in several years.

Last season the Vermont team won a pitching duel from the Jumbos, who will be out to even the count this year.

One change will probably be made in the Tufts infield to try to bolster the woefully weak defense which the Tufts team has shown. Ray Ockert, the midget third baseman, will be shifted to shortstop and Norm Ingalls, veteran shortfielder will be moved to third.

Al Cook for Middlebury and Adams for Tufts will probably be the opposing pitchers.

Huskies Picked to Win Eastern Intercollegiates

N. U. DEFENDS TRACK TITLE TOMORROW

Northeastern is a heavy favorite to retain its Eastern intercollegiate title at Worcester tomorrow.

Unless a "dark horse" appears in the ranks of Springfield, Amherst, Middlebury, Mass. Aggies, Conn Aggies, Rhode Island State, Tufts, Norwich, Vermont, Trinity or Union, the quintet of Northeastern champions should retain their titles.

Capt. George Martin, in the pole vault; Almon Morang, high jump; Francis Powers, high hurdles; Algot Forsberg, javelin, and Francis Shea, quarter-mile, are the defending champions.

Three of these athletes, Martin, Morang and Powers, have been invincible in their specialties at Worcester the last two years.

Maryland Lacrosse Star Is Injured

Bill Chew of the University of Maryland played freshman lacrosse for a season and was with the varsity this year until the other day without being injured in the strenuous Indian pastime. Then he fell off a horse and broke his wrist and dislocated his shoulder, shelving him for the rest of the campaign.

U. of Maryland Stars in Big Track Meet

Bill Kinnamon and Urban Linzey will represent the University of Maryland in the Southern Conference championship meet in Birmingham. Kinnamon will run in the 22-yard low hurdles and Linzey will compete in the half-mile. Kinnamon has a record of 24 4-5 seconds, while Linzey is expected to do under two minutes.

BIG STABLE IS SHIPPED

The Lullwater Farm stable of harness horses, owned by Walter T. Candler of Atlanta and in charge of Trainer Fred Egan, has been shipped to the Charter Oak Park track at Hartford for the final training grind of the season, the stable being scheduled to start the season on the Bay State Circuit the coming month.

The majority of the members of the stable are youngsters, but one notable exception is the trotting mare, Lullawat 2:03¼, one of the last of the get of the famous sire, Peter the Great.

After the death of that famous sire, Candler purchased from Laurel Hall the entire crop of yearlings by him, a total of 18 head for which he paid around $50,000, and Lullawat developed into the most noted of these.

Trains to Trot

Black Scott, 2:03, raced in the Grand Circuit pacing stakes last season, is being trained at the trot this season.

HUSKY ON HIGH

Almon Morang, Waltham, star athlete at Northeastern, is entered in four events in the Eastern intercollegiates at Worcester tomorrow. He will take part in the high jump, broad jump, pole vault and javelin throw. He is counted on to score heavily and help N. U. to defend its association title.

Two Tots Tossed to Safety in Blaze

Two children were tossed from a window by their mother, one man was burned and six persons were driven to the street in scanty clothing when fire swept the first floor of a dwelling in North Munroe ter., Dorchester, yesterday.

The children, Barbara, 5, and John, 7, landed on a raincoated lawn and were uninjured, after Mrs. John M. Cole, the mother snatched them from their beds as flames reached their room.

Babe Ruth Returns to Hub, Still Idol of Fandom

BAMBINO HAS IMPROVED GREATLY

By JOE CASHMAN

Babe Ruth, the man who has come back almost as often as he has hit home runs, has gone and done it again.

When the Bambino was last here on April 19 he looked like a "busher," both at bat and afield. He had trouble knocking the ball out of the infield, couldn't run when he did hit and was unable to move off a dime in the field.

His thousands of Hub friends and admirers who saw him on that occasion were willing to agree with the experts who predicted that his days as an outstanding star were over for good.

Joe Cashman

How mistaken they were!

Today, the same Mister Ruth returns to Fenway, scene of his earliest and many of his greatest diamond triumphs, with a record which proves conclusively that he is still the greatest player the game has ever known.

Since the first of May he has hit the ball as hard and consistently as ever before in his long and brilliant career and his fielding has been on a par with his hitting.

He has come up from nowhere to third place in the list of leading hitters with a mark of .363, is hitting home runs as frequently as ever and is scampering about the field with the speed of a youngster breaking in.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Diamond Pick-Ups

The rumor that Detroit might get the St. Louis franchise in the National League next season must have caused consternation, whatever that is, among the Cardinals.

No sooner did the story break than Gabby Street's charges emerged from their slump and now boast of an eight-game winning streak.

They had no need, however, to get excited over the yarn. It's an old and ridiculous one. Detroit is one of the best baseball towns in the land whether the Tigers are good or bad, because the fans have no other team to support.

Frank Navin, owner of the Bengals, wouldn't think of allowing a strong team like the Cards to compete with his club and no new team can get into Detroit without his permission.

Bill Carrigan is in town to attend a few of the Red Sox-Yankee games. The Lewiston Squire is more than pleased over the way his old pal Heinie Wagner picked up where he left off and is confident that the club will go places and do things with the little Dutchman at the helm.

Many fans feared that Charlie Ruffing might become "high hat" and forget his Hub friends when he joined the Yanks. "Big C." has done neither. He is the same sociable, happy-go-lucky scout now that he was when with the Sox.

Few of the other big league pilots agree with Manager Bucky Harris of the Detroit Tigers that the champion Athletics are going to run away with the American League race this season.

Most of those with whom we have talked think that the Mackmen will have their troubles repeating and wouldn't be surprised if they were beaten out.

Bobby Jones Crushes Briton on Links

victory today. After the first nine holes, Wethered never had a chance. They ended all square at the end of the first nine, and from then on Bobby Jones tasted triumph and never looked back. Playing match less golf, the Atlantan added the morning round 7 up and came out for the afternoon play facing a situation entirely to his liking.

He trounced the Brush leader unmercifully, giving him only one hole of the afternoon round, which ended on the 33th. Wethered had played a good game at the outset and with the exception of one 4 in the afternoon, maintained a fairly high standard throughout. But next to Jones he looked a tyro.

Mackenzie fulfilled his promise in supporting style, pushing Campbell out of it by the score of 8 up and 6 in play, thus giving America a point score so far of 3 to 2.

Play was as much brilliance as determination, Dr. Whiting successfully pulled out of his one-hole disadvantage and defeated John Nelson Smith 2 up and 1 to play.

This demolishing defeat was the worst the British Walker Cup team had ever sustained on their own soil.

Sande Gets Thrill From Preakness Win

Earl Sande seems to get almost as much thrill out of the messes taken of his races as he does in riding his horse to victory, according to the noted jockey's comments in Paths Sound News story of the Preakness Racing Classic at Pimlico.

After riding Gallant Fox to victory to the tune of a $51,925 purse, Sande voiced these sentiments before the Paths microphone.

"Audience, I want to tell you how happy I am to be back in the pictures again after such a long lay up, and I owe it all to Gallant Fox. He certainly is a great horse and he won the race himself."

Goodwin Again E. H. C. Head

Augustus F. Goodwin of Hamilton, owner of the steeplechaser Land Boy, was re-elected president of the Eastern Horse Club for the ensuing year at the annual meeting at the Union Club yesterday.

Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., owner of the Essex stable of steeplechasers and flat runners, was re-elected vice-president; Sumner Pingree of Flying Horse Farm was re-named treasurer, while John R. Macomber, owner of Petes Wrack, was retained as chairman of the board of governors.

CRIMSON, NAVY SET FOR RACES

Marking time until the starter's gun sends them off against Penn, Navy and M. I. T., Harvard's four crews rested today, satisfied that they are ready for the coming regatta tomorrow.

Whiteside will probably start Charles Hovey in place of John Hallowell in the varsity boat. Hovey has been at No. 4 ever since the vet-ran Hallowell was forced to vacate his place due to a severe cold.

Otherwise the Crimson navies are set to a man. Ralph McKesson will be in Hovey's place in the jayvee eight.

According to the dopesters, Harvard has an even chance against Navy to win the varsity race and the Crimson freshmen should sweep the river in their division with ease.

Bets of 8 to 1 that Harvard would win all four races tomorrow were finding many takers today.

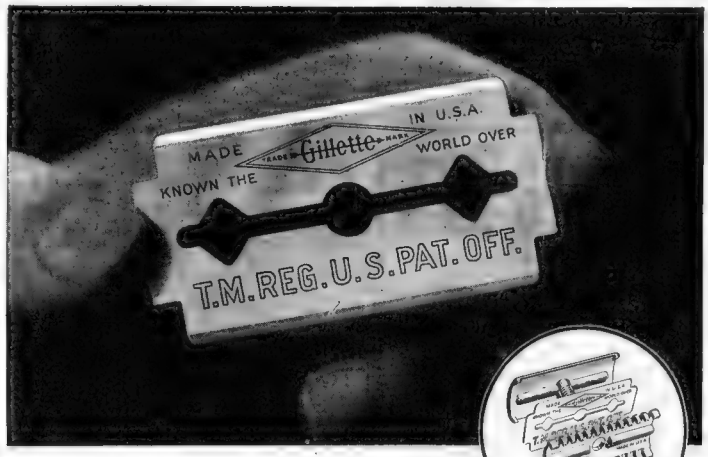
SQUARE blade-ends



Easier and safer to handle

MOST MEN like fishing—but not fishing down the drain-pipe for a slippery razor blade. That's one of many reasons why a vast army of men are praising the New Gillette Blade. Its square ends can't slip out of soapy fingers; and how easily the new blade reaches into the tight little corners around the mouth, nose and ears!

There are so many other big improvements that you won't appreciate them all until you try this New Gillette Shave yourself. Here are just a few: no more wiping or drying of parts. New blade resists rust. "Razor pull" is banished forever by new reinforced corners of razor cap and cut-out corners of blade.

Sounds almost impossible to give you all this remarkable new shaving comfort for only one dollar, doesn't it? Yet your dealer has your New Gillette Razor set waiting for you—your choice, in fact, of five styles of handsome cases. Additional new blades are priced at one dollar for ten and fifty cents for five.

Enjoy this new shaving thrill tomorrow morning by seeing your dealer on your way home tonight.

SCHMELING BATTERS PARTNERS

Endicott, N. Y., May 16 (US)—About 1000 persons gathered in the enclosed pavilion to see Max Schmeling in action yesterday, and the German treated them to four rounds of bruising boxing.

Max almost knocked out Andy Wallace in the first round of their fete-a-fete.

The Black Uhlan had warmed up with one round of haircuts with George Neron, the Greek who recently knocked out Knute Hansen.

Early in the first round of his go with Andy, there was a hot exchange and Schmeling's right shot home like the hammer of Thor.

It was a short punch but such a powerful one that even with the heavy pillow it felled Wallace like a steer under the butcher's maul.

SHARKEY TELLS HOW HE DEFEATED WILLS

By JACK SHARKEY
American Heavyweight Champion

Clang! The old gong sounded and my battle with Harry Wills was on.

The Brown Panther came out of his corner fighting, bent on destroying me as quickly as possible. He drove a left hook for my head and I stepped out of the way of it. He followed this up with a right for the jaw. I dropped my head under the punch.

After two minutes of fighting I started to jab and hook Wills as he rushed to close quarters. I would crack my left to his chin as he would start one of his heavy blows. The result was his punch went wild, while my left hook would send his head back and jar the Negro's spinal column.

The nervous energy which enables one to put over a knockout is concealed in the shoulders and spinal column.

I kept tapping his reservoir of vitality as I rocked the Brown Panther with left hooks and jabs.

Wills' eyes began to pop with surprise as he realized, that instead of having a setup, he was in for the fight of his life.

I continued the same tactics for the second and third rounds. Wills' mine repeatedly, while I kept him on his heels by scoring with left jabs and hooks. I was so much faster than Harry that I could hit my huge opponent almost at will.

Johnny Buckley had tipped me months before the fight that Wills was easy to hit with a short right overhand punch. I had spent weeks practicing with this blow, confident that some day I would get a chance at Wills with it.

Early in the fourth round, I scored with one of these punches. I did not put everything I had behind it as I did not wish to leave myself open to a counter attack from the Negro until I was sure how the blow would work out.

Wills was staggered when I clipped him on the chin. I followed it up with a savage left hook to the point of his jaw.

I increased my speed and made Wills miss repeatedly. I finally got him in the corner of the ring. I feinted with my left hand and as Harry started to guard against it, I drove a fierce, right hand sock for the jaw.

Every ounce of energy in my body was behind that blow. It landed square and true and drove Wills halfway across the ring into a neutral corner.

BELL SAVES WILLS

Wills, his eyes glassy, knees and body trembling, instinctively dropped his head and covered up. In the excitement, my punch was also wild and went over my opponent's head.

Wills was smart enough to get out of the corner. I chased him and finally was able to score with a hard attack to the body. Then the bell sounded and Wills was saved for the time being.

I gave Wills a decisive setback in the fifth round. I hit him at most at will with left and right hand punches. Meanwhile Harry rattled into play his usual line of fighting when at close quarters.

He hit time and again after being ordered to break by Referee Patsy Haley. He also used the back hand punch which is barred.

From that point on it was a very one-sided battle. By the end of the eighth frame I had both of Harry's eyes pretty closed, while there were big welts on his face and body as a result of the terrific hammering I was subjected him to.

Wills' courage was the only thing that enabled him to carry on. At the end of each subsequent round it was necessary for the referee or one of Harry's seconds to show him the way to his corner was.

Despite his groggy condition, Wills kept his mighty right-hand punch in the ninth end. In the eleventh round, I got careless during an exchange of blows and Wills caught me with a right-hander high on the head.

It stunned me and my head from my shoulders. It was a good thing the sock didn't land on my jaw.

FIGHT STOPPED

In the 13th round when Wills continued to hit after the break and use the back hand punch after repeated warning, Referee Patsy Haley stopped the contest and declared me the winner.

Neither Wills nor Paddy Mullins, his manager, made a murmur against the decision. I think the Brown Panther was glad the referee had stopped the bout as he could hardly have lasted another round.

When Haley lifted my arm in the air and the 40,000 fans joined in giving me a mighty ovation, I was overcome with emotion and cried like a baby.

TOURNEY FOR GOLF CROWN ON TODAY

By BILL GRIMES

Pitted against the cream of schoolboy golfers in the State and representatives from New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut, Wilfred Crossley, the 17-year-old Dedham high school boy, will start to defend his New England interscholastic championship this afternoon at the Unicorn Country Club.

The second annual New England interscholastic championship will be decided over the 36-hole route, with a field of almost 100 schoolboys battling for the crown, now in the possession of Wilfred Crossley.

Although the field in last year's New England interscholastics boasted of some of the best schoolboy ranks it was not as fast as that which will be in action at the Unicorn Country Club this afternoon and tomorrow morning.

Bill Grimes

Wilfred Crossley is a fine young golfer. He is one of the steadiest in the rank of the younger niblick wielders. In fact it was his steady brand of golf that brought him through last season at Oakley, for until the last hole Parker, who was representing Exeter, and is now a member of the Yale freshman team, was well out in front. Parker cracked at the 36th hole, taking an eight which cost him the championship.

Wilfred Ogg Has Chance to Win

If the interscholastic championship is captured by an out of town schoolboy, Wilfred Ogg, of North junior high school in Worcester, has the best chance to accomplish this feat. Young Ogg, who is a son of the famous Willie Ogg, professional at the Worcester Country Club, is one of the soundest golfers in the coming generation. He has been developing rapidly during the past two seasons, and according to reports from the Heart of the Commonwealth, is primed to deliver at Unicorn.

The Reidy brothers, Bill and Frank, Jr., Heath, Jr., and Kenneth Goldberger, Both Heath and Goldberger are Newton boys and have been prominent in Massachusetts junior championships.

If Joe Lynch is on his game, there is no reason for him trailing any contender. Joe is a former junior and caddy champion but, as was the case last year, he has been devoting more time to baseball this spring than golf.

Joe Lynch Is Strong Favorite to Win

Lynch's golf has been confined to the four ball brand and for that reason he may be a trifle at Unicorn but if the shots roll off his clubs as they should, there is good cause for predicting that the second New England interscholastic championship will be won by the Jamaica Plain high boy.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf Instructor

The first essential for golf that continuously improves is a fixed method. I have for some years sought to find one—one that would work for anybody—and here it is at last. I have in this, I confidently believe, a method with which you can start improving at once. It should give you distance with all your clubs and it should make rhythm and a smooth pass easy and automatic. I begin with the hands, which is where your swing must begin and end, and this method, you will find, I think, at once to give you the right length of back swing, a slow unhanging rather than hitting, and the stroking sunny of the ball should be snappy and effective. I have reduced the whole thing to one simple, easily-understood mechanical principle, which is: Make the palm of your right hand face away from you at the top of your back swing. There are other details which will be discussed in articles to follow, but that is the basic principle. See you tomorrow.

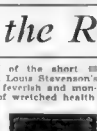
At the Radio Dial

THE STORY of the short years of Robert Louis Stevenson's life is a tale of feverish and monumental work, of wretched health of alternate opulence and destitution, of patricism and ardent devotion to the most significant incident in his glittering and tragic career is portrayed tonight in the Famous Loves series on WBZA and the NBC System at 8:45. This is his meeting with the Californian, Fannie Osbourne, pursuit of her in steerage across the Atlantic, and their ultimate reunion. This adored woman's two children were to become Stevenson's greatest helpers in the work during the long years of his invalidism; the daughter as his secretary, and the son as his literary collaborator.



Robert L. Stevenson

RADIO is jammed with talky-talk these nights. A year ago Radio had a rule of thumb that no one would listen to unrehearsed monologue for a period of more than five minutes. This dictum went by the board in the dogs. Now we are nightly treated to long dissertations by dozens of commercators whose object seems to be to crowd an impossible number of words into a given number of minutes.

IN THIS MATTER of gab-ability the men seem to be putting the women to shame. Or perhaps it is more apt to say they're shaming their own sex's ancient tradition of reticence. Ida Bailey Allen and her women associates are no loss for words, but their linguistics are largely confined to the morning hours.

THERE MUST be a reason for it all. Someone must have discovered that the American race likes chatter. Quick to answer to the needs of its great public, Radio jumps into the breach. No longer must we depend upon haphazard industry, banquets and presidential proclamations lavish for our oratory. Radio assures us a steady, regular and unfailing flow.

Meantime, the poor neglected announcers stand in the background and recklessly gnaw their gistening nails while interlopers talk and walk away with the credit and the cash that should be theirs.

A NEW RADIO menace leaped out of the darkness last night. Frederic William Wile, erstwhile intelligent and somewhat unbiased recorder of governmental affairs at Washington and more lately in London, embarked upon a tirade against the United States Senate and several of its important committees. The cause of his wrath was the seeming audacity of the committees on foreign affairs in questioning Secretary Stimson closely upon matters concerning the London conference and its proffered treaty—and the corresponding questioning of Secretary Adams by the committee on naval affairs regarding the same event.

MR. WILE literally foamed at the mouth when he thought and spoke about our legislators who insist now during knowledge of the procedure of the American declaration at London. He called this questioning something little short of a Spanish inquisition, and later washing dirty American diplomatic linen in the world's back yard."

If the Senate and the House cannot be permitted to pursue their functions of safeguarding the interests of the nation and voting at a check upon the judicial and administrative branches of the government, then they may as well go out of business altogether. It is easy to forget that the United States Senate is the treaty-making body of the government. After all the members of the Senate come closer to the claim of statesmanship than any other group in the nation.

AS MATTERS developed, Wile brought out the fact, in spite of his diatribe against the committee inquisitorial, that there is a sharp difference of opinion among navy experts themselves regarding the cruiser stipulations in the naval treaty. Admiral Pratt, a member of the London delegation, insists that 8-inch guns are far more effective than 8-inch . . . "And I speak as one of those who would do the fighting," he said.

Admiral Hilary Jones insists with equal positiveness that giving up the privilege of mounting 8-inch guns is a base surrender.

This Day in Our History

Benjamin Stoddard was appointed first Secretary of the United States Navy in May, 1789. The department was created April 30, 1789. Since then it has grown to one of the leading navies of the world. During World War it convoyed 2,000,000 troops to France.

SECRETS OF LUNCHEONS THAT REALLY PLEASE

Martha Lee Tells You How to Make Pickup Dishes

(From Martha Lee's Friday morning broadcast over WHDH from the Boston Evening American studio.)

Good morning, everybody!

Today is my lay on luncheon. Fifty years ago there were three meals a day in the average American household; breakfast, dinner and supper. Now, however, that the dinner hour is pushed along to the close of the day, a substantial noon day meal is really a necessity. To me, luncheon is one of the pleasantest meals of the day. It breaks up the monotony of household tasks, it is eaten without flurry or hurry and usually with little ceremony. Pick-up dishes and accidental entrees figure conspicuously in luncheon menus—things for which men, as a rule, care little, but wives and daughters much.

Martha Lee

Left-overs are the foundation of the family luncheon and properly deserve a special word or two.

In preparing left-overs great care should be taken not to destroy their digestibility. Do not use great heat for a long period of time. Whenever possible, use hot sauces and let these sauces do most of the heating. A double boiler is a good utensil to use in re-heating left-overs.

As a rule, re-heated meats need to be more highly seasoned than freshly cooked ones. However, it is not wise to use too many flavors in one dish.

Certain flavorings make left-over dishes most palatable, such as onions, carrots, turnips, tomatoes, celery tips and parsley, eggs, savory, bay leaf, lemon rind, pickles, olives, celery seeds, meat extract, and chili sauce. Curry powders, used in small quantities, give a very pleasant flavor to left-over meat dishes, but are not appreciated as they should be, I think, by American housewives.

Croquettes are very useful in using up left-overs attractively and are not half as hard to make as the average person seems to suppose. Let's consider the simple directions.

Two things are essential to successful croquette making. The mixture must not be too stiff and the fat in which they are cooked must be sufficiently hot and deep enough to float them. The hot fat must form a crust immediately to prevent the fat from reaching the interior of the croquettes. Croquettes should be made at least two hours before they are to be cooked. Roll them in beaten egg, then in fine crumbs or bread dust. Arrange them on a floured dish not touching one another and leave on ice or very cold place to stiffen. An excellent method of egging and crumbing croquettes is to break an egg into a plate, beat it slightly with a fork and add one tablespoon of water. Put another plate with crumbs. Roll the shaped, chilled croquette in the crumbs and place on a board that will stand for five minutes. Then dip in the egg mixture, let them drain, and roll them in the crumbs again. Let them stand a half hour or longer on the board and fry in hot, deep fat.

The simplest form of croquettes are made with the basis of a stiff cream sauce. To accomplish this, scald one cup of milk. Mix to a paste a scant half cup of flour seasoned very highly with salt, pepper, a dash of celery salt and onion. This will make a very stiff paste, to which can be added chopped meat. The mixture is then formed into croquettes and fried (as directed in the general way. Left-over gravy makes an excellent sauce to serve with croquettes. If you have a half cup of left-over peas, add these to the gravy.

At this time of the year Rice Croquettes with new maple syrup are especially delicious either as a dinner dessert or as a main dish for luncheon.

RICE CROQUETTES

3 or 3 tbsp. milk
1 egg
1 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. salt
Little white pepper
Cayenne
3 tbsp. chopped parsley

Warm the rice in a double boiler, with enough of the milk to soften it. Add the butter, seasoning, and beaten egg, and cook until the egg thickens. Spread the mixture on a shallow plate to cool, then shape into rolls. Roll in fine bread crumbs which have been seasoned with salt and pepper; dip in beaten egg, and roll in crumbs again. Cook in deep hot fat until brown.

Any special croquette recipes you'd like? If so, drop me a line—Martha Lee, 5 Winthr p Square, and then I'll come to you by return mail. Now goodbye for today. I'll be with you again Monday morning at this same time, 11 o'clock, from Station WHDH.

Are Women Loyal?

I've just had a hard question asked me by one of our club members—whether I think that women are as loyal in their friendships to one another as men are. I'm so puzzled that I'm passing the problem along to you and asking for your opinion.

"Men have a fine capacity for friendship," writes my correspondent, Mrs. F. W. M., of Arlington, but somehow we women never seem to reach it. We may be fond of our friends, listen to their sorrows and rejoice with them, but in our own hearts we hold something back. A man, however, gives everything to his friend. He may see and criticise his faults, but there is no pettiness in this criticism and his outward manner hides the loyalty and trust. Men friends are separated for years, but when they do meet again the old friendship is still there and beneath the dignity of middle aged, the ghosts of the boys and girls they once were live again. The intervening years are as if they had not been. We don't hear of women experiencing such friendship as David and Jonathan, and Damon and Pythias. I don't really think they're capable of them, do you?

Let's have your opinion, sisters.

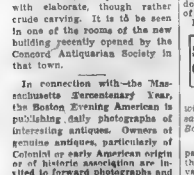
Daily Antique

No. 97



The day-bed shown today dates from about 1710. It has come down in the family of Peter Bulkley, who founded the town of Concord, Mass., in 1635. It is of New England workmanship, with elaborate, though rather crude carving. It is to be seen in one of the rooms of the new building recently opened by the Concord Antiquarian Society in that town.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American will publish daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Fashions Are There 'On the Dot'

By ANN ARDEN

(Ann Arden broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

THERE ARE those who go to survey and those who go to survey the surveyors whenever an important sporting event is scheduled. And to others besides the excited participants spectator landscapes have looked "like so many dots" this season. For dash in the 1930 conception is DOTS

AT RECENT horse shows and races, dots have the duty beyond what is usually expected of spec ter fashions. In a way of coloring. The season id they will continue to flaunt their smartness at coms, and the various outdoor activities of school id college commencement festivities about to take n center of the stage.

DOTS IN circulation at the moment are some imes very small. Some times big and bold. And frequently the big and little mix. One chooses ac cording to their scale value for her own personality. But it is important to note that all parts of fashion are divided into dots.

THE SLEEVELESS tuck-in blouse is of fine net, tucked lengthwise. The vari-colored embroidered dots are repeated in the round collar of the blouse, which is finished in small bow and ends at center back.

THE BRIMMED hat is of pink baku straw, softened with group of small tucks at center front.

THE SUBTLE blending of colors has never been more cleverly achieved than it is this season. Pastel colors of soft, indefinite shade have a big season before them. They were worn most successfully by the smartest women, in combination with dark accents.

A MORE obvious use of two colors is in the instance of the tailored suit with its vari-colored silk and cotton blouses. Pastels harmonize with all dark colors and especially interesting combinations are pink with navy, lettuce green with brown and pink with navy.

The Marry-Go-Round

Lovers—and Others

In love, cards, roulette or the stock market, the only sure way to beat the game" is by staying out of it.

As long as a woman has the last word, she doesn't care HOW hard a man slams the door.

A man is always shocked and disappointed if, however, after marriage, that the girl who seemed such an ideal companion at smart dances and perfectly-appointed dinners, is just a washout on a hiking party or camping in the rain.

Women always wonder sadly why an attractive bachelor missed marriage; men always wonder envious ly how he escaped it.

If the husband can find an ex cuse for him, he has only his father to blame. It didn't take women long to learn that it is easier to keep canned corned beef cold than to keep fried chicken hot, while a man dawdles home from the office.

When you look at a man, who has just emerged from a barber shop, after complete rennvation, it is almost impossible to believe that he has SOME object in view while the car is being repaired.

The old-fashioned bride needed a special trousseau for baking and brewing; but the only thing a modern spring bride needs is a strong right arm to open cans and a working knowledge of "brands."

Latest spring slogan: "Own your own Husband" Why sub-lease another woman's?"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Warm Weather Feeding for Infants

Many infants are below normal weight. When this condition exists it is either from improper feeding or because of some physical ailment.

Most babies need as great a total of food as the normal baby, of the same age. How are you to tell if such a child is enough food at each meal we give? So far as habits go such babies are not very different from the normal. There must be a way found to provide for the delayed growth in some way, and this can be done by giving extra feedings.

Dr. Copeland

Usually such children have diminished digestive capacity. For this reason their must be provided easily digestible food which has a high calorie value. By this I mean food that has heat-giving properties.

The undernourished child should be fed five or six times a day. Since it may take only a few ounces at a feeding, it is desirable in such a case to raise the food value of the mixture by adding one or two ounces of some dried milk preparation. This will increase the food value without adding much to the bulk.

If one baby is suffering from undernourishment from insufficient food it will soon gain under such feeding. But if it does not improve it may be because there is some infection in the system. It may be in the middle ear, the nostrils, the nose, the throat or some other place. Your doctor should be consulted about it.

In hot weather an infant's capacity and appetite for food is much lessened. In that event not so much food is needed. But it is very important that the milk is made safe by pasteurization or boiling and that it is kept under proper refrigeration.

All food should be handled most carefully, in order not to contaminate it in any way. The hands should be kept scrupulously clean in preparing baby's food. A tiny baby's stomach and whole digestive tract are most delicate and easily upset.

The baby should be given an extra amount of water to drink during hot weather. There is much evaporation of the water from the surfaces of the body at such a time. More water must be supplied to make up for this. Give it midway between the feedings.

With the added nourishment, good care, plenty of fresh air and direct sunshine always being careful to shield the nerves, even the child should make rapid progress to normal weight and good health. But in case the baby does not improve very soon your doctor should be consulted to see if there is any underlying trouble which needs treatment.

Girl Unafraid -:- -:- -:- By Gladys Johnson

CHAPTER 60

"I really isn't necessary that you see," he replied. "I am to understand then that you will see your attorney right away and file suit for divorce—desertion will do. Certainly you will not name another woman.

"I shouldn't delay if I were you. And before I will develop a poor memory about your—trips, I wouldn't worry about that Chinese affair. Do it through hell and high water to see that he's thrown in jail. I have an idea that the days of The Spy are numbered. And—I guess that's all."

He took his hat and walked from the room without another glance at the woman watching him venomously from the divan.

A relief to be out in the sunshine and fresh air. He threw back his shoulders. He drew deep breaths that he plunged down the hills.

Something of the first fine edge of courage with which she had taken this leading plunge deserted Ardeth after the first few days.

Often in the weeks which followed she would find herself standing, her hand crying to her throat in the old childish gesture of fright, her eyes large and dark. Once when she was sweeping the pine needles from the porch, the brown road, the long files of pines standing motionless in the morning sunshine, overwhelmed her with a sudden sense of unfamiliarity.

Another time, she awoke in the middle of the night to hear the rain pouring on the cabin roof. She lay there listening so soundly that for a moment she lost track of her surroundings; she fancied herself back in the flat with the Hargroves. The window was in the wrong place . . . Surely there was no window there . . . But almost have moved the bed to a different position when she cleaned the room today . . .

Through the open door she could hear Ken turn fitfully and then in return he gave me nothing.

He long drafts of cool air coming through the pines . . . breathing deep of the tingling air, there was no room in her heart for fear or unhappiness. The dream still held her.

On the 4th of April, she was dawning the sense of reality. It was the fat of worry gnawed his heart in secret. The realization of Ardeth's sacrifice rushed in on him at moments, making his heart leap. He wanted to shout in panic, that she must go away—at once. A ghastly, reckless thing to do! A dreadful, impossible, splendid thing—but she must go away for her own sake! Oh . . . too late. Too late in the scornful eyes of the world.

He blamed himself bitterly and futilely. He lay awake in the dark. All very well to rant against narrow minded critics, but now he had delivered this girl he loved into their memories. They would search her sweet frankness for ignoble motives. Soiling the fineness of her as hot fingers can bruise delicate petals. . .

When she appeared in the doorway of his room in the morning, a gay little greeting on her lips, his heart would ache in pity. Dressed in the plain aprons of pink or blue gingham which she had bought at the village store, her hair damp and combed into loose waves of dark gold, she looked like a little girl freshly primped up for school.

He had hurt her . . . he had hurt her . . . the knowledge beat through his thoughts like a doleful bell.

As Ken grew stronger the note of tenseness in their relationship deepened.

For long hours now he sat on the porch in the morning sunshine or lay in the afternoon shadow of the cabin where the hill sloped away to a brown fruit orchard. Ardeth was always busily sewing or reading aloud from one of the books Tom faithfully sent in every week.

Ken was still thin, but there was a coat of tan now on his face and hands and the haggard look had left his eyes. He was very gay and bantering when he talked to her. They had adopted the lighthearted pose of children who bashfully strive to conceal their true feelings.

Ken never kissed her now. Once when their fingers met, both drew sharply back as though the contact had burned. Ardeth was startled in a little nervous laugh. Her eyes fluttered up to the mans, fell away when she saw that he was watching her with eyes gone deep and intense.

The next moment they had themselves in hand. They were dancing at the antics of "Grimps" the tame bluejay who had adopted them for the sake of the dinner crumbs. But there was a strained note to the laughter and in a moment the girl slipped away to the porch on a pretext.

How long could they play the role, she was asking herself, frightened. How long—when she was so tingling aware of Ken in every drop of her blood. When his mere touch could rouse such shivering sickness in her heart.

She became rebellious and unhappy. She hated the murmur of the pines. They became the scandalous whispers of the women who had haunted the Smokerie in the days of Futile ivisual women like Jeanette—like Maida Durant . . . women half alive, pouring into conventional molds. She raised her face to the sunshine and grimaced at them. Then she broke into startled laughter.

At Ken's questioning glance she exclaimed: "I'm growing foolish up here in the mountains, Ken. Pretty soon I'll be answering my own questions, like the old prospector who went by here the other day talking to himself."

But there was no answering smile in the man's eyes. He had guessed her thoughts.

One day, as she stooped to draw the collar of his robe closer about his throat, he caught her hand. In the afternoon shadow the mans reserve broke. She was suddenly in his arms, her head on his naked breast, eyes looking almost fiercely into eyes.

"I guess it going to end, darling," he spoke through set teeth. What are we to do when I'm well and we leave here?"

The pretext of camaraderie dropped from them like a cloak.

"I don't know, Ken," she whispered. "I've wondered"

"Now the fat is in the fire—I wish we'd gone together," he said, and she could not even laugh at his unpoetical simile.

She was suddenly the reckless, generous giver. "Others have done it—I mean real people—people who care nothing for the world. We'll go far away. We'll work together—we'll manage somehow . . . We've earned our happiness, dear."

He held her face between his hands for a moment, regarded it a little sadly. A sweet, vital thing . . . tenderly colored . . . easily hurt. . . He shook his head. "Can't run away with it, honey. "We're not the kind to go sneaking about the world. What a mess it is . . ."

She drew away, trembling.

Silence fell like a curtain between them. A curtain neither of them dared to lift.

Ardeth tried to think of trivial things—the monthly little tasks of every day which were small anchors holding her safe. Prunes for breakfast—she must be sure to make a list of things to buy from the store down the road. She must go down to the village and see if there was anything for them. It was the day for Tom's letter, for methodical Tom wrote every week. Dear, faithful Tom. Long, careful rather solemn letters . . .

A long legal-looking letter for Ken and a fat one from Tom for herself.

She read it as she walked back from the store along the brown dirt road. Ringing silence of the mountain afternoon about her, broken only by the scolding of the jays and the whirring of insects. Now and then a jewelled flash as a bluejay swooped from a pine tree with a rush of wings.

Then sunshine and pines and the ribbon of road were receding to a great distance and the mountain stillness seemed to buzz with voices . . .

Ardeth was reading with eyes gone wide and dark and a heart which had set up deep pounding. Tom's letter, telling of the divorce suit which Cecile had so unexpectedly filed. Tom's letter bringing release . . . making their world then suddenly right!

Ardeth found that she had gathered the precious sheets of paper close to her breast. She had started on a stumbling run to the cabin

Heart and Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Fails for Every New Face

MY DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I have met with a serious love problem and am seeking aid in solving it from you.

Several years ago I met the most conceited boy of 18 that I ever knew. I, of course, fell in love with him. I am also 18. I don't think he ever returned the love I gave him, although he has told several of my friends that he cares for me a great deal. He never knows it, for he is always talking about "this girl I met and this girl I took out." He has hurt my feelings more than once, although he asks forgiveness when he realizes he has gone too far. I was a part of friend, adviser, pal, I might even add sweetheart, for he often told me. He took me to the "whoopee" party and dance and he falls for every good-looking face he sees.

I have given him my love and in return he gave me nothing.

"TRUE BLUE LOU."

Dear "True Blue Lou":

Boys of 18 are often apt to be overbearing and conceited, especially if they are at all successful with the girls.

You think his good qualities justify your being a good friend to him, and not continue to be. It will probably be a long time before this young man thinks of marriage, . . . give him lots of time like your own life, make your own friends and be careful about too much love making.

His Actions Puzzle

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a boy nearly 3 years. He wrote to me about once a month. Since February I have not received a letter or heard from him in any way. He has asked me out several times and seemed to enjoy my company. Since February I have received no telephone calls from him and he has not invited me out. The other day, as I was walking down the avenue, he was riding by in my machine, and I believe he saw me, but did not speak. What would you do if you were me? I have written two letters to him and I have received no answer.

Will you please publish your answer in the Boston Evening American as soon as possible?

Thank you. ANXIOUS.

Peabody.

Dear Anxious

When a man makes up his mind for one reason or another that he doesn't care to go with a girl any longer, there is little she can do but accept the fact gracefully. If he doesn't possess even the ordinary courtesy to answer your letters and give you an explanation of his actions, it is time you forget him.

Your Questions Answered

Beatrice Fairfax will be glad to answer your questions regarding any problems of heart and home. Names will be kept confidential. If you wish an immediate answer enclose self-addressed stamped envelope.

Mrs. Beeckman Advises

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Should She Make a Gift?

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A friend of mine is giving a party at her home in honor of our coming 16th birthdays. I am to be the guest of honor. We have never exchanged gifts at the beginning of the birthday. Is it proper for me to send her a gift on that day and when is it either is correct? F. H.

Yes, it would be gracious and thoughtful for you to send your friend a lovely corsage if you are especially poor taste, and I should like to protect you from the criticism that is sure to come to you from well-bred people who observe this poor taste letter. You could I presume, afford to buy some white or ivory or very light blue paper, double-sheeted, and of fine texture.

Name Bothers

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—I have a mother and step father, and in printed announcements of my marriage should I use only the name of my mother or the names of my mother and stepfather?

2—How long after the wedding should the announcements of the marriage having taken place be mailed? L. I.

1 It is much the best form to use the names of both your mother and your stepfather on the invitations and announcements of your marriage. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Foster
honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter Miss Alice Landers
to
The other form, but not nearly so much good is:

The marriage of
Mrs. Foster's daughter

2—If possible, have the announcements all ready—engraved (not printed), addressed, stamped—ready to mail directly after the marriage has taken place. This will insure that the friends who live in town will receive the announcements the day after the marriage has taken place.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Considering the delicacy and softness of facial tissues and muscles they stand up pretty well. Women don't wrinkle as early as they used to, judging by the photographs of our noble ancestors as recorded in the old family albums. There's less worrying going on and practically no warping. The average woman knows how to kick up a rumpus. She's too much of a man to that. Emotions and ill-health are two influences that destroy the form and texture of the skin. If a woman has a good digestion and a calm rein on her emotions she should be pretty well assured that she is well past her fiftieth birthday.

Wash-cloth packs are used for sagging facial tissues. They are not only soothing but they seem to make enlarged pores close up shop. The egg white is beaten slightly and pasted onto the face. The colder the egg white the better the effect. A brisk tapping aids and puts the pores to sleep. Then with ice cold water dry the skin surface, apply a heavy tissue builder and continue the tapping.

When finger nails break, oil should be applied to the nail beds, where the nail grows. When these are pale, something should be done to arouse circulation. Nothing better for that than deep breathing, rubbing the beds with moistened salt and washing away, long walks, sleeping in a room in which there is a strong current of fresh air. Nothing can be done about white spots on the nail. In a few months they are gone into nail limbo.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

PRICE CHANGES IN WALL ST. ARE NARROW

New York, May 16—Stocks drifted irregularly through a narrow range of prices in a dull and featureless market today. Trading was confined largely to the utility issues and specialties in which the professionals have shown particular interest.

After rallying sharply from yesterday's closing break, the high priced specialties gradually settled to lower levels, many of them suffering from sheer neglect

U. S. LOCO. SETS LOW

American Locomotive, on which the dividend was inactive, yesterday broke to a new low for the year at 64¾, down 3

General Electric, United States Steel, Westinghouse and other favorites soon declined a point on the average.

The utilities made the best bid for speculative notice, and buying demand flowed in fairly large volumes for United Corporation, Columbia Gas & Electric, North American and Public Service of New Jersey.

United Aircraft rose 6 points to 83¾, fairly active trading.

Celotex spurted 6 points t o 63¾, on announcement of the dismissal of the receivership application.

The stock market was forced to worry along without public support. There were several up and down price movements in the forenoon.

Quotations generally held within a point or so of yesterday's close. Pressure against several favorites, such as United Corporation, Johns Manville, General Electric, A. M. Byers and Warner Brothers Pictures, was not sustained

NATIONAL SUPPLY

National Supply dropped 11 points to 101, the year's minimum, on disappointing first quarter earnings.

Auburn Auto, Vanadium, Delaware & Hudson, Westinghouse Pump, J. I. Case and Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred rose 3 to 6 points, while du Pont, American Foreign Power, American Tobacco B, Detroit Edison and Bohn Aluminum rallied 2 points or more.

The market as a whole made no response to the $67,000,000 decrease in brokers' loans announced last night.

Official confirmation was given of the rumored plan to acquire 25 per cent of the stock of Columbia Gas & Electric by exchange of United Corporation common and preferred stock, the first effect of which was to cause heavy selling of United at a point below yesterday's close.

Persistent selling blocked the upward move of the amusement, radio, copper and other important groups, but the issues displayed no particular weakness, and a firm tone was in evidence in the utility stocks.

Call money renewed at 3 per cent.

One of the most encouraging statistical analysis making its appearance was the annualist preliminary statement of business conditions in April, which, at 928, showed a sharp upturn from the 89.5 figure for March.

The principal March-to-April gains were in freight car loadings, electric power production, and petroleum consumption. It was particularly notable that the month showed a greater than seasonal gain in the movement of manufactured goods. The annalist stated, however, that present indications point to a smaller gain in general activity during May.

The foreign trade figures, appearing for April were again unsatisfactory. Exports t $334 000 000 were the lowest of the year and showed a drop in excess of $90,000,000 from April, 1929. Imports at $308,000,000, were approximately 20,000,000 above the low level of February, but were more than $100,000,000 below the same period a year ago.

Several of the leaders made the highest prices of the day in the last hour despite the limited demand and recurrent liquidation in the copper and motor accessory groups.

United Aircraft ran up more than 6 on the squeeze of the short interest and J. I. Case extended its gain 10.

New York Central, Eastman Kodak, Coca Cola and Columbian Carbon were considerable to heavier. Electric Storage Battery dropped 5 at the year's low

The close was steady

Safeway Stores' Business Improves

New York, May 16 -W. R Grisweld, secretary of Safeway Stores, Inc. states sales of the company for the first four months of 1930 conditions in the West were improving.

"Sales for this period were $73,230,372, against $64,545,139 in the same period last year on a comparable basis, a gain of 13.53 per cent," he said. "Actually business was somewhat better than this. Due to the average decline of about 9 per cent in commodity prices it was necessary to sell more units of merchandise this year than last year in order to obtain a similar volume of dollar sales. Volume which we schow in dollar sales is evidence of a considerable increase in unit sales volume.

Bond Offerings of Week Are Larger

New bond offerings for the week totalled $190 905 000 as compared with $121 000 000 last week and $79 545 000 in the corresponding week last year.

NEWS OF New York Curb BOSTON Trends of the Day MARKETS

PRICES MIXED IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices were mixed in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today after mid-day selling that sent several issues to new low prices for the year. Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway issues declined from 2 to 4 points. The first preferred dropped over 3 points and the "B" stock and adjustment issues were each down 4 points.

Edison sold off 5. New England Equity 2 and the first and second preferred issues of Boston Elevated were down 1.

Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred advanced 3 points, Boston & Providence 4, Utilities Jones 2 and Stone & Webster gained almost 2 points. United Shoe sold at a new high for the year for the year.

Cities Service gained a major fraction. Andes Petroleu mnold at a new high for the year. Atchison added-over 2 points, Quincy Mining and Kreuger & Toll held steady.

Parker Trading Corporation directors declared a dividend of 20 cents per share on the class A common shares and a dividend of 50 on class B common shares of the corporation, payable June 2, 1930, to stock of record at the close of business May 15.

On account of the present condition of the metal market, Mohawk has further reduced its copper rock shipments from 1800 to 1500 tons a day, which compares with 2005 about a year ago. The bulk of this mineral is being stored at the mill until there is a greater demand for metal.

Seneca has found the vein at the 11th level in No. 3 shaft better than in the 9th and 10th. The lode was recently cut at this point. The encouraging showing augurs well for the character of the vein at greater depth, as the rich Ahmeek shoot enters No. 1 below the present bottom.

Business Holds Up Better Than Usual

New York, May 16—Although basic industry now faces the necessity of summer slackening, it is holding up somewhat better than usual, and after several weeks of doldrums and spring fever, business has perked up slightly and resumed its slow and irregular climb back towards normal, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ending May 17.

Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. reports for quarter ended March 31, net of $59,417 after depreciation, taxes, etc., equivalent to 14 cents

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

LOWER EARNINGS

D. R., Boston—I want to buy common stock. Would Consolidated Cigar be all right?

Ans.—Consolidated Cigar is speculative. The current annual $7 dividend maintained since October 1, 1926, was not covered in the first quarter of this year. For the year ended December 31, 1929, earnings were $9.46 a share, compared with $8.66 and $9.03 and $10.87 in 1927, but in the first quarter of current year net was $1.87 a share, compared with $1.72 for similar period in 1929.

BE EXPLICIT

Belmont—I have been a reader of your paper for many years and should like information on Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, especially the common stock.

Ans.—Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, organized in 1928 as a merger of Colgate & Co., and Palmolive-Peet, is a large manufacturer of soaps, shaving cream and toilet articles. There is no funded debt; capitalization is $13,884,800 6 per cent preferred, par $100, and 2,000,000 shares no par common. In 1929 earnings for the common were $1.03 a share, compared with $2.67 in 1928. An initial quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share October, 1928, was increased to 62½ cents in January, 1930. At recent levels the yield was 4 per cent N-t all investors should buy common stocks. How much cash have you? What securities do you own?

CAN GET 6 PER CENT

J. H., Cambridge—I have $5000 in a savings bank and want to buy stock. How about duPont?

Ans.—E. I. duPont de Nemours earns plenty dividend and in the first quarter of current year net profits were $1.22 a share, contrasted with $3.43 in similar period last year. Full year's net for 1929 was $8.99 a share, compared with $8.97 in 1928 and $8.45 in 1927. Regular dividends, with extras, have been paid from 1915. The new $10 par common stock, issued in January, 1919, to replace the old stock on the basis of three and one-half shares for one, is on a $4 annually. January 4, 1930, stockholders received 70 cents extra. The yield at present levels is only 3 per cent. You could get 6 per cent from such issues as Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific 7 per cent preferred, Bush Terminal debenture and Illinois Power and Light 86 preferred. Ten shares each would cost less than $3100 and bring $200 annually. This plan leaves over $1900 for the savings bank.

TARIFFS MUST BE TOLERATED, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES

New York, May 16—The United States once again is arousing the ire of the rest of the world. This time it is the tariff.

The tariff, too, adding to President Hoover's long list of bad breaks.

They are being gratified to him "Hoodoo Hoover."

The day will come when men will look back upon tariff walls as spite fences. In a more advanced civilization tariffs will be regarded as childish, uneconomic, unjustifiable, anachronisms.

There never yet was a scientific tariff, because tariffs in themselves are essentially unscientific, bars to the free play of economic forces, theoretically indefensible.

But the world has not yet reached the stage where all tariff obstacles can be swept aside. Tariffs must still be tolerated.

That, however, is no reason why our politicians should proceed to build tariff walls calculated to bring down upon the head of American the almost universal condemnation and ill-will of the whole world.

More than 30 countries, it has been announced, protest against the "limited revision"—save the mark!—our Washington politicians have been indulging without rhyme or reason, one day blowing hot, the next day blowing cold, one day boosting the rate, the next day nullifying their own action.

Candidate Hoover proclaimed "limited revision" for the benefit of agriculture. The kind of revision the tariff tinkerers have been jockeying has displeased our farmers more than it has pleased them. Several crops were thrown, from the form of higher import levies on certain farm products, but the tariff schemers were so to that other schedules many other schedules, were raised, schedules not calculated to make our industrial farmers more prosperous, but to add seriously to their economic burdens.

Indeed, the "relief" relief provided our agricultural population recalls the story of the lazy, boastful negro on the lower Mississippi who eked out an existence catching bullfrogs. One evening he "allowed" on his cronies that he had that day caught the biggest bullfrog from in all the world. It weighed, he gravely assured them, 102 pounds. Incredulous, they insisted on going and weighing the frog.

They discovered the frog actually weighed two pounds and that the rest was bull.

That's pretty much the kind of "relief" our farmers are receiving from tariff manipulators.

Thus the first Hoover tariff has already failed to win popularity either at home or abroad.

What consequences are threatened?

First, the fall elections are likely to have consequences unpleasant to the administration. The disintegration of our two-party system of government may be aggravated, making it impossible for the administration to function in a way calculated to inspire confidence and stability throughout the business and financial world.

Second, country after country is likely to institute retaliatory measures against the United States and its foreign trade. Of course, the United States is perfectly entitled to alter its imposts as it sees fit, just as is any other country. But it is not the quintessence of statesmanship to incite retaliation or boycotts of American goods abroad. Our foreign trade badly needs a boost rather than a serious blow.

Let us hope, for the sake of business, employment, and prosperity, we will soon enter an era inspiring less reference to "hoodoo Hoover" and more reference to old-time "Hoover luck."

Liberty Mutual to Pay Big Dividends

Dividends of 20 per cent of each yearly premium were declared on all policies expiring in July by directors of the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. at their annual May meeting at the home office in Boston. The company has a continuous profit-sharing record of slightly better than 25 per cent each year for more than 10 years, resulting largely from lower operating costs and careful selection of business which saves large losses.

Directors of the Liberty Mutual were particularly impressed with the announcement that the company's sales cost decreased 14½ per cent in five years on the face of a 101 per cent increase in premium writings.

Total cash dividends of over $26,500,000 have been paid to policyholders since organization. Liberty Mutual is one of the leading writers of workmen's compensation, general liability and automobile insurance.

Asks City Pay for Clothes

Worcester, May 16—Max Druiz has petitioned the City Council for damages to his clothes caused by the city's tar sprinkling machine.

SCHOOL HEAD AT STOUGHTON WON'T RESIGN

Stoughton, May 16—Sharp controversy between civic officials looms here as Frank A. Morris, superintendent of the Stoughton schools for the past five years, remains adamant in his refusal to resign as the school board demands.

The time limit, 6 o'clock Wednesday, found Morris steadfast in his refusal and he has maintained his stand up to today.

He asserted yesterday his conduct of his office had been above reproach both officially and personally. He believes the whole situation is due to personal animosity, coupled with political feeling.

EXPRESSES SURPRISE

He maintained the whole thing had come as a complete surprise to him and, since he could find no justification in the demand, was determined to fight the case to the very end.

According to his story he had been requested to leave the meeting of the school board on Monday for a short time and on his return was greeted with a demand for his resignation before six o'clock Wednesday. In the event of his refusal he would be formally removed.

This discharge would be in the form of a written notice from Raymond McEvoy, chairman of the board. Morris said he had not yet received such notice. When this notice is received he will reply in a written demand asking the charges against him.

The board must then give him thirty days' notice of a meeting at which he may defend himself. At this meeting the final vote on his dismissal would be taken, a two-thirds vote being necessary.

Morris did not visit his office yesterday, but spent the day at his home. He explained this was not an admission of resignation but because he would not be annoyed there by visitors.

STUDIES LAW

He said he was looking up the law on his situation and was prepared to take every possible measure to vindicate himself in the eyes of the people of Stoughton.

Burton L. Winslow, town manager, said he had no desire to enter the controversy, but admitted it was the consensus of opinion that the Stoughton schools had been materially bettered durinb the tenure of Morris.

MOVEMENT IN BUSINESS IS ON UPSIDE

Incidentally pointing out that many business men nowadays pay more attention to the stock market than is good either for them or their business, Gage P. Wright, New York business and investment counselor, says in the current Bulletin of The Business Economic Digest that the recent behavior of stock prices had undermined some of the confidence in business improvement that had been established previous to the latest reaction on the New York Stock

GRILL WOMAN IN BAKER CASE

Washington, May 16 (INS)—Vice-President Curtis was asked to prevent Department of Justice Agents from severely questioning the wife of a man who admitted he had been keeping company with Miss Mary Baker, government clerk, for two years. It was charged they accused her of masquerading as a man "and taking the law in her own hands."

It was learned today the agents have not revealed the contents of the husband complained to Curtis.

Miss Baker, daughter of a Virginia minister, was found shot dead in nearby Virginia, April 11, after she was seen struggling with a man in her automobile.

Investigation disclosed she had several male admirers. Each has furnished an alibi.

Public Backs Mr. Foley in Fight to Jail Garrett

District Attorney's Opportunity to Win Approval

Boston has every reason to be pleased with the attitude of District Attorney William J. Foley in taking up the final stages of the Garrett case.

Mr. Foley is showing courage and determination in hurrying Garrett to trial, and to the penitentiary if proved guilty. The district attorney is giving positive evidences he realizes the public looks to him to bring about proper punishment of every member of the corrupt gang who has disgraced his uniform in unlawful operations.

GARRETT MUST BE PUT ON TRIAL. He must not be permitted to escape paying the full penalty for any crimes charged to him in the attorney-general's report upon which he is found to be guilty. Others, in or out of the department, who have been partners in the graft and corruption of recent years, must suffer like treatment.

It is Mr. Foley's job and his responsibility to see that every guilty man is punished. Public suspicion that a man of Garrett's reputation is more powerful than the law must be allayed. Not until the penitentiary doors slam to behind all grafters and their associates in crime will public confidence in our courts, our laws, and the police department be restored.

The Boston Evening American hopes that Mr. Foley will be equal to the situation, despite criticisms directed at him in the past. He must first prove his independence of the "higherups," in politics and in business, who have been able to dictate the conduct of the police department in the past. He should and must look to the people, rather than to the bosses, for political preferment hereafter. He doubtless realizes that in the Garrett case he has a great opportunity to prove his mettle. If he does carry on as he should, he may rest assured that the public will reward him according to his accomplishments. If he fails, he need expect no further favors from the electorate.

Keep at it, Mr. Foley. The public is with you in the first moves you have made to drag Sullivan out of the insane asylum and to prove he is mentally competent of helping you put the felon's brand upon those who have earned it. You are sure of the support of every man and woman in Boston, if you continue along this line.

The ousting of Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson must not be the last word in the Garrett scandals. The impression must not be left in the minds of the public that Wilson was sacrificed to quiet the clamor for police department reorganization.

Circumstances surrounding the pensioning of Capt. Patterson, before there could be an opportunity to even reprimand him, were such as to leave a bad impression on the public mind.

Now, if grafters and gangsters should escape punishment, the public will never give up the thought that it has been tricked again by the men sworn to uphold the law and punish the guilty.

It is Mr. Foley's task to destroy this suspicion.

THE GRAFTERS MUST GO TO JAIL.

Malden, Waltham

Suburbs Show Us How to Celebrate

Boston's active and thriving suburbs are showing the big city the way, in observing the Massachusetts tercentenary. Boston may be slow in getting started, but if our celebration fizzles it will not be because of lack of being shown how to do it.

This week Malden is having a grand time and doing a splendid job, under the direction of Mayor William A. Hastings and the committees assisting him. They've had the Lord Mayor of Maldon, Eng., and the Lord Mayor's wife as their honored guests, and each day has been marked by a rousing celebration of some kind. The Boston Evening American congratulates Malden, as it does the other communities who have staged celebrations adequately commemorating their part in the wonderful story of this great State.

During this week, Northampton, Arlington, Everett, Roxbury, Newton and Fall River have put on or will stage various events of interest.

On Saturday, Waltham will be host to thousands of juvenile musicians who will compete for the band championship.

Mayor Patrick J. Duane, Frederick R. Basely, president of the Waltham Chamber of Commerce, and Earle J. Arnold, secretary of that group, are working in close association with Clifford V. Buttelman, executive secretary of the musical festival, to make this a big affair. Waltham is fortunate in having such an aggressive and competent group in charge of this event. Thousands of visitors will join the townsfolk in welcoming the army of players.

Next week other communities will celebrate.

After a while, Boston swings into line.

Let us hope our celebration is as successful as are those of the towns about us.

Bradbury F. Cushing

Governor Allen could not have made a better choice for membership on the Industrial Commission than he did in naming Bradbury F. Cushing, of Hotel Statler.

Mr. Cushing is a thorough New Englander, and a man of broad business vision. Our industrial problems are certain to be carefully considered by him in the light of common welfare.

Hot wave has departed and we're now enjoying our Indian Spring.

No team work between insect pests and weather. By the time first flies and mosquitoes arrived their chance had passed.

Crippled Tar Needs Care

By NELSON HARDING

Here's a case that needs attention,
It's a crippled sailorman,
Otherwise the U. S. Navy,
Help him, Senate, all you can.

It was at the London parley
That he suffered injury,
And he needs more careful treatment,
Not to mention sympathy.

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

In addition there are one or two methods by which, at certain pages of the record of the past, we can get even an estimate in single years. For example, trees form annual rings, and some of the big trees in California take us back several thousand years.

When the ice sheets cover part of a country, the flood produced by each summer's melting lays down a layer of clayey deposit over the neighboring country; and Baron de Geer has shown, by counting these layers in southern Sweden, that the retreat of the last ice sheet in Scandinavia took over 10,000 years. But these more detailed methods commonly apply only to the immediate past, and to periods of time that are but one or two ticks of geology's clock.

H. G. Wells

There is also a further method applicable to any period where marine shells were fossilized. It is based on the fact that many bivalve shells show annual growth rings like trees.

The annual growth rings are divided up into minor rings, each new addition to the shell being made after a feeding period.

These minor rings vary much in breadth, according to outer condition; so that each annual growth ring bears its own individual stamp in the number and size of its separate feeding rings; and the same stamp will be impressed on all the shells in the same neighborhood.

By comparing a whole series of shells in the successive layers from one locality we can identify the separate years by the pattern they have left on the growth rings, and so count their succession.

This method has been as yet little worked out; but it should give valuable results whenever thick layers of one type have been laid down in one place, and contain the shells of bivalves.

Ultimately by such means as these we may carry a surprisingly detailed calendar back for hundreds of thousands (and even millions) of years into the past from the present time.

And even for the remoter periods we are already approaching a sufficiency of knowledge whereby the margin of error can be narrowed down to ten million years or so, which on the geologist's scale of time is not a large figure—a matter of being out by five or ten per cent.

Such are the data upon which we base the figures we have inserted upon our diagram of geological formations. If the reader will turn back to that he will find one or two points of very great interest in relation to our curiosity about the future course and duration of evolution.

In the first place he will remark that there is a huge disproportion between the lengths of the great eras of geological time.

The age of mammals seems hardly to merit the name of era at all; it has only endured for about fifty million years.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, May 16—Thoughts while strolling: Who remembers when women had secret pockets in their skirts? And gates closed automatically by buckets of rocks tied to chains? Chief Long Lance, author, man-about-town and monocle wearer. Midgets usually puff big cigars.

A two cent dance hall. Preston Sturgis, who authorized "Strictly Dishonorable." And Brock Pemberton who produced it. Restaurants featuring free lessons by bridge experts. Helen Kane and Winnie Lightner are slim again. Never see anyone pale over receipt of a telegram any more.

Philip Merrivale's chin. A "Shave Shoppe." Lucien Boomer, the hotel man. A gentleman gives a sudden start, looks at his watch and sets off on a run. Somewhere a wife is tapping her foot. Joseph Hergesheimer idling before an antique window. Those flashily dressed women so conscious of beauty and sex.

The steady stream at the postal money order windows—sending money back home. Pennhyn Stanlaws could easily pose for a collar ad. So could Aubrey Eads. Banners proclaim an oyster eating contest. And even the thought makes me squeamish. The Odd Shoppe.

A window of drowsy puppies with noses buried in paws. William Hodge is white haired. A flapper gives a taxi driver a light from her patented lighter—and skips the gutter into a speakeasy. And here I am prancing along like a Nance—whistling "Thank Your Father!"

A neat description overheard at a lunch table: "He is a motion picture director making his first picture so you can imagine what he's like."

On Saturday in New York it is a custom for important men of affairs to take their sons to lunch at some popular restaurant. It is about the only time they are able to bestow the parental touch. Youth no longer buries a toe in the carpet, fumbles with hands or turns red to the ears in presence of elders. Neither is there annoying brashness. The modern boy is more self-possessed than the young man of 25 was 20 years ago.

When I was 16 and mostly knuckles, teeth and ears, it was a high adventure to drive to town at sun up in the spring wagon. In the office of a business man the other day, his 15-year-old son entered, shook hands warmly and after a little small talk departed with: "Take care of yourself, Dad." He was sailing that midnight alone to London to join his mother. He might have been going to New Rochelle for the week-end.

On the other hand, nothing is so exasperating as those "wonder kiddies" on stage and screen. Their amazing sang froid itches up the smacking hand.

Fifth ave. is one of the blase boulevards of the world, yet a fluffy kitten in a joyous frolic with itself in a window mirror near 50th st. this morning brought the entire block to a dead halt.

But the biggest giggle was inspired by a portly matron who barged into the gathering and lifting a lorgnette inquired: "Whatever is askew?" The dear dowager seemed perturbed—fearfully.

Moving 50 Prisoners Is a Good Start

Overcrowding in Charlestown Firetrap Pen to Be Relieved a Little, But PRISON MUST GO

Signs of life among our officials and legislators, looking to the alleviation of very bad conditions in the Charlestown "firetrap," the State penitentiary, are encouraging.

Fifty prisoners are to be moved at once to the Norfolk prison camp. That will help some. But it is mostly worthy of mention as showing that the officials upon whose shoulders rests the responsibility for the continued use of the dilapidated, unsanitary old "dungeon" actually realize that it is up to them to do something about it right away.

Moving of this group of fifty will not solve the problem. The good work, looking to the ultimate tearing down of the Charlestown disgrace, must not stop with this gesture.

The only real solution of the problem is the razing of the penitentiary, and the removal of all the 900 or more men confined there either to Norfolk or to another modern, sanitary institution.

Massachusetts has temporized with its prison problem for more than fifty years. Today it is faced with the daily peril of a fire in the penitentiary that would make the Columbus horror seem almost insignificant. Prisoners are herded into dark, unhealthy cells. First offenders are hardened by their environment and associations into incurable criminals. Charlestown prison is 105 years old. It is at least 50 years too old, right now.

The Legislature should pay close attention to the resolve of Rep. Joseph Finnegan. This resolve, changed or amended as needed, opens the way for the appointment of a commission which would map out an orderly, sane plan of penal reform in the State. Then must come action—we have had too much talk and too little action for a half-century now.

Massachusetts cannot hold up its head in the sisterhood of states so long as she continues to tolerate the dreadful conditions as are bound to obtain in such a hell-hole as Charlestown.

Let's Be Courteous

Boston Has Big Opportunity This Year

Boston has a great opportunity this tercentenary year to establish friendly relations with tens of thousands of automobile tourists who will be our guests during the summer and fall.

This opportunity will come through courteous and helpful treatment of our visitors, both by police officers and by the public. Boston streets and traffic rules are puzzling enough to Bostonians, and strangers are certain to have an unpleasant time of it if the police are harsh and the public is indifferent.

It is a known fact that a great many tourists avoid Boston during their New England tours because of the widespread belief that the streets are difficult to traverse and that arrest and embarrassment lie in wait at every tricky turn and corner.

This feeling costs the merchants a lot of money each summer, and shuts off the many historic and delightful beauty spots of Boston to vast numbers of people to whom, under other circumstances, a visit to the Hub would be the high spot of their vacations.

The Boston Automobile Association and Commissioner Hultman already have started things moving for "Courtesy" year in Boston. If the men in the ranks and the people of Boston and its suburbs co-operate, each year hereafter will see a growing influx of visitors.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Character Is Contagious

This is a prophylactic age. We make a tremendous fuss about anything which may soil or sicken our bodies. We scrub and sterilize and disinfect and avoid contagion. Yet our health and happiness are much more dependent on our minds than on our bodies. And we rarely think of safeguarding our minds against that most vicious infection—the infection of inferiority.

Elsie Robinson

Trashy humans are much more dangerous than the most toxic germ. Vulgarity, laziness, dishonesty and all shoddy standards are far more contagious than spallpox or scarlet fever.

You pick your drinking cup with care. You should use a thousand times more care in picking a friend or even a casual associate, for if there's a taint in that character you will inevitably absorb it.

Nations as well as individuals have been ruined by the contamination of inferiority. You have awful—roughnecks—of course—but—they—can't—possibly—hurt—us—because—we're—so—different.

But we don't stay different long. "Play with pitch and you'll be defiled," runs the old saying. Play with inferiority and you'll be infected. Character is contagious!

"As the beginning of our era, three-fifths of the Italian population consisted of slaves; that is, of marketable human objects without rights. Every Roman was surrounded by slaves. The slave and his psychology flooded ancient Italy and every Roman became inwardly, and of course unwittingly, a slave. Because, living constantly in the atmosphere of slaves, he became infected through the unconscious with their psychology. No one can shield himself from such an influence.

"The European, thoughtless of the spiritual heritage that belongs to him, cannot live unpunished among the negroes in Africa—because unnoticed, their psychology gets into him and unconsciously he becomes a negro. There is no fighting against it. There is in Africa a well-known technical expression describing this condition, namely, 'Going black.'"

"No one can shield himself from such an influence," says Dr. Jung, and, unfortunately, few of us want to shield ourselves. There's a secret weakness that makes us like to have inferiors around. It's hard work keeping up with your superiors, but you can always get a hand from your inferiors. This pleases both our laziness and our conceit. And we can always console ourselves by saying that they're awful—roughnecks—of course—but—they—can't—possibly—hurt—us—because—we're—so—different.

But we don't stay different long. "Play with pitch and you'll be defiled," runs the old saying. Play with inferiority and you'll be infected. Character is contagious!
